President Asked Probe Of $65,000 Tax Lobby

Urged Inquiry Into Air Plants' Fund to Beat Excess Profits Levy

By Mary Spargo

President Roosevelt, in a personal letter to Attorney General Francis Biddle on August 17, 1942, requested an investigation of the $65,000 tax-lobbying fund case now being presented to a District Grand Jury by the Justice Department, The Post is enabled to disclose today.

The President forwarded a report made at his request by the Securities and Exchange Commission on a number of cases involving alleged war frauds, with a covering letter in which specific attention was directed to the lobbying fund, among other items, with a request for investigation.

Aired During Probe

Public mention of the $65,000 fund was first made during the course of a House Naval Affairs Subcommittee hearing into the past production failure of the Brewster Aeronautical Co., of which Henry J. Kaiser, war production genius, has recently become president.

The lobbying fund was a side issue in the subcommittee's investigation, but when it was discovered Chairman Vinson (Democrat) of Georgia demanded prompt investigation by the Department of Justice, and parts of the SEC report were placed in the public records of the committee.

According to that record, including both the SEC report and its supplement, and direct testimony from some persons involved, the $65,000 was raised for the express purpose of obtaining an amendment to the Revenue Act of 1940 so that a new House-passed excess profits tax, which appeared unjust to certain aircraft companies, particularly Brewster and Lockheed, could be eliminated.

Introduced by Herring

The amendment in question was introduced by former Senator Clyde Herring (Democrat) of Iowa, then a member of the Senate Finance Committee. Herring, who recently resigned as Assistant OPA Administrator, has testified here before the grand jury.

A witness before the grand jury yesterday was Frank J. Comfort, Democratic National Committeeman from Iowa. Comfort flew here in 1940 at the request of William D. Jamieson, former Democratic Representative from Iowa, now a

Senate Kills Federal Soldier Vote Project

By Robert C. Albright

Southern Democrats teaming with Senate Republicans yesterday carved the Federal war ballot heart out of the soldier vote bill.

Led by poll-tax State Democrats, the coalition rolled up a 42 to 37 Senate vote for a substitute bill clinching State control of soldier absentee voting.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley told the Senate: "This will no more facilitate soldier voting than a pious resolution adopted by a ladies' aid society or a Rotary club."

Green-Lucas Bill Discarded

Tossed into the waste basket was the Green-Lucas bill, assuring every eligible member of the armed forces, Merchant Marine and Red Cross a simple Federal war ballot on which he could register his choice for President, Representative and Senator.

Eighteen Republicans joined 24 Democrats in approving the States rights substitute, while 12 Republicans and 25 Democrats voted "No." The riddled bill then was passed by a voice vote.

The Senate had spent days perfecting the bill, placing strict bi-

Reds Smash At Rail Lines In Gomel Area

Retake 100 Villages, Hold Near Cherkasy, Gain in Dnieper Area

London (Saturday), Dec. 4 (AP).—Mud-spattered Red army troops bit into the important German railway network northwest of Gomel in two directions yesterday, stood firm against repeated counterattacks in the Cherkasy area and expanded their Dnieper River bridgehead below Kremenchug 15 miles to the west through powerfully defended territory, Moscow announced early today.

German troops recoiling before the Soviet attack northwest of Gomel sustained heavy losses, the Soviet midnight bulletin said, as the Russians swept up more than 100 villages and hamlets. Key points taken in this drive—carried out through blizzards of howling winds, wet snow and rain—were Sverjen and Dovsk, only 11 miles and 18 miles northeast of Rogachev, respectively, and Soltanovka, 12 miles southeast of Zhlobin on the Gomel railroad.

Dovsk is the junction of the Gomel-Mogilev and Rogachev-Roslavl railways. All three of the towns taken screen the approaches to the hubs of the German rail network in that region—Zhlobin and Rogachev. Seven hundred Germans were killed alone in one sector of the fighting in that area.

Soviet troops, blasting their way forward through complex German trench systems took Novo-Georgievsk, a district center of the Krovograd, the communique said.

To Relieve Pressure

With this westward thrust of 15 miles into the Dnieper sack below Kremenchug, the Russians moved to relieve the pressure on their comrades holding on in the up-river bridgehead near Cherkasy.

Soviet forces also hit southwest of Kremenchug and by heavy fighting won back the railway station of Koristovka, a junction on the Khargov-Odessa and Kiev-Dnepropetrovsk lines 21 miles east of Znamenka, said the communique.

The Russian column that took Soltanovka moved up the rail line connecting Gomel with Zhlobin, the communique said. The whole drive in the region represents a mopping up operation between the

Fifth Army Stabs Ahead In Big Push

Heavy Aerial Cover Paces Offensive; 8th Army Advances Six More Miles

Algiers, Dec. 3 (AP).—Paced for the second day by aerial assaults on elaborate German fortifications, Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's Fifth Army stabbed forward from Calabritto against the right enemy flank guarding the main road to Rome in the fourth day of the biggest offensive of the Italian campaign since Salerno.

Clouds of smoke and dust hung over the battlefield. Fliers methodically destroying gun positions and entrenchments saw signs of a fierce combat raging below. There was no indication whether Clark's troops yet had reached the hard core of the Nazi line.

Equally bitter fighting raged on the Eighth Army front, where the right wing of Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's forces slugged 6 more miles up the Adriatic coast and approached the important center of San Vito Chietino, only 16 miles from the big port of Pescara.

Nazis Resist Desperately

The Germans had reorganized their defenses farther inland and were resisting desperately around the ancient Roman city of Lanciano, where they held a 900-foot ridge dominating the surrounding country. Montgomery's men captured Castel Frentano, 2½ miles southwest of Lanciano.

(A broadcast from Berlin reported German troops had evacuated Lanciano in the face of the Eighth Army's advance.)

Official reports disclosed that elements of the veteran German Ninetieth Light Infantry Division had been rushed from northern Italy and thrown into the fighting near the Adriatic. This unit, the twelfth German division known to be fighting on the Italian front, was with Marshal Rommel's Africa Corps and bore the brunt of the long rearguard fight from El Alamein back to Tunisia.

(Radio France in Algiers reported, without confirmation, that Field Marshal Kesselring, Nazi commander in Italy, had ordered a retreat along the Adriatic following the "crumbling of his entire winter line.")

Drive Populations Toward Armies

The Germans were reported to be driving the populations of small towns out toward the advancing Fifth and Eighth Armies and then blowing up bridges behind them to create confusion and hamper the Allied advance.

Yesterday's limited advance gave General Clark's warriors a good sample of the 20-mile deep defenses the Nazis have built into the center of the line they were instructed to hold at least until the New Year. The attack was made through curtains of machine-gun fire and through barbed wire entanglements and minefields.

Official reports said the Germans had mounted guns "on every strategic height" overlooking the Via Casilina, which leads to Rome.

D. C. Paper Salvagers to Comb Previously Neglected Areas

Washington's waste paper salvage program, which is enlisting the aid of the Boy Scouts to collect vitally-needed scrap paper for war production, will seek to reach the large area of homes and businesses here previously neglected as a source because of inadequate collection facilities, the District Salvage Committee announced yesterday. The scouts are working in cooperation with The Washington Post, which sponsored the plan.

Fully 40 per cent of the salvable paper in this community can probably be found in the large number of private residences, apartment houses and business establishments not now reached, if regular collections are made, it was stated.

Residents in approximately half the apartment buildings here, not now saving paper, will do so if it is picked up regularly, it was estimated.

This is also true for about 50 per cent of our small homes and the same number of business and commercial establishments, especially the smaller ones, according to the committee's figures. The latter are "known sources" of regularly available accumulations of the type of paper desired and needed, it was said, and with adequate coverage should help put over the local drive.

Half of Berlin Now Believed Smoking Ruins

41 British Planes Lost in 1500-Ton Raid on Capital

Bombers' Wrath

London (Saturday), Dec. 4 (INS). A heavy force of RAF bombers headed from Britain toward the Continent early today.

London, Dec. 3 (AP).—RAF air armadas rocked Berlin in a blasting new assault last night with more than 1500 long tons of new fire bombs and explosives, leaving perhaps half the Nazi capital's buildings in ruins, and the entire center section of the city in flames.

Swarms of fighters and intense flack met the bombers and 41 British planes fell during the great battle.

But nothing that Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering could do prevented the great force of bombers from reaching the heart of Germany.

British reports estimated that one-third of Berlin was gone after the fourth raid November 26, indicating that if the latest blow was as destructive, half the city now has been blown up or gutted by fires.

Total Now 15,000 Tons

The bomb load dumped on Berlin in the new campaign was raised to probably 15,000 tons.

Berlin dispatches to Sweden described enormous new fires in the north, central and southern portions of the city which still were burning from the previous attack. They quoted the Germans as officially admitting "heavy damage" from the four-ton blockbuster bombs, at least 30 of which fell in factory areas.

The Berlin correspondent of Zurich's Tages-Anzeiger reported the greatest destruction in the raids was caused by fires, adding that "the number of incendiaries and phosphoruus cans totaled several dozens per house in the concentratedly bombed quarters, and often gutted up to 500 buildings simultaneously."

The phosphorous-type incendiaries being used by the British are many times more difficult to extinguish than other fire bombs.

New Objectives Hit

The Anhalter station was struck again, Swedish reports said, and there were explosions in the Potsdamerplatz. No morning newspapers were published in Berlin.

The first bombs hit uhnamed "new objectives." Night fighter patrols were reinforced continual-

TREACHEROUS—Marines make captured Japs walk bent over to prevent any surprise attack or a dash for freedom

Marines Expected Big Guns, Bombs to Leave Few Japs Alive and Fighting on Island

By Master Technical Sergt. Jim G. Lucas of Tulsa, Okla.,
First Marine Corps Combat Correspondent to Land on Tarawa.

Tarawa (Delayed), Nov. 23 (AP).—Five minutes ago we wrested this strategic Gilbert Island outpost and its all-important air strip from the Japanese who seized it from a few missionaries and natives weeks after they had attacked Pearl Harbor.

It has been the hittingest, costliest, most sustained fighting on any front. It has cost us the lives of hundreds of United States Marines. (Official reports listed 1026 Americans killed.) But we have wiped out a force of 4000 Imperial Japanese Marines—we expected to find only 2000, mostly dead.

Before we started it was great fun. We grinned and chortled. We said, "there won't be a Jap alive when we get ashore."

That was the plan. Naval and air bombardment was to all but destroy the island. The few living Japs were to be so shell shocked there would be no opposition. I recalled Major Mills' instructions:

"We don't intend to neutralize the island. We don't intend to destroy it. We will annihilate it."

Island Enveloped in Smoke

As dawn broke, Tarawa was completely enveloped in smoke and flame. Japanese gun emplacements—eight inchers—continued to reply. Our battleships looked like sullen, defiant bulldogs as they ignored them and continued to pound the shore.

At dawn, our planes came in. We could see them disappear into the smoke and flame. We could hear the sputter of their machine guns. We could see the debris raised by their bombs. It was wonderful.

But something suddenly appeared to have gone wrong. We learned H hour had been delayed 30, then 45 minutes. The pounding continued. There was little doubt there were still living—and fighting—Japs on the island.

Our assault waves were in the water, ready to hit the beach. We were in the second wave, due to hit after the first men reached shore. Without warning, an eight-inch shell hit and exploded 10 yards off our side. We dived behind a hatch, laughing at each other as we came out. A second shell hit five yards off, killing a sailor and spraying our deck with shrapnel and salt water. We upped anchor and steamed out of range.

'Landed Against Heavy Opposition'

Fifteen minutes later, we climbed into our tank lighter, sharing it with many other Marines, a truck and a trailer.

"We have landed against heavy opposition," came the first word from shore. "Casualties severe."

It came over our radio as we moved in. We looked grimly at each other.

As we pulled toward the beach, we were met with enemy shell fire. A boat on our starboard side received a direct hit. Five men were killed. We pulled alongside and dragged in the survivors. There was no chance to salvage their equipment. Swiftly we moved out of range.

A control boat roared by, a naval officer screaming at us to "stay back" until we received word it was safe to go in. That was 10:30 a. m.

At 1 p. m. we started in again, moving toward the pier, which appeared undamaged. We were stopped by machine-gun fire. Corpl. Raymond Matjasic, 23, of Cleveland, one of our combat photographers, who had been seated in the cab of the truck, fell to the floor. The truck's windshield was knocked out.

At 3 p. m. we tried again. Shells tore the water on all sides. Two more boats went down, and more Marines died. We backed out again, unable to pick up the survivors. Many of them swam to us and were later moved back to their transports. Many of the wounded drowned.

The sun was punishing. There was no shade. We broke out our rations and nibbled at them. At 5 p. m. the control boat pulled up.

"Do any of you have ammunition?" the naval officer yelled through his megaphone. "We've got to get it ashore at all costs.

"We have a truck," we answered.

"To hell with that," he said, and roared away.

At dusk our battleships and cruisers opened up a terrific antiaircraft barrage. There was only one answer—Japanese planes.

"Prepare to go over the side," a lieutenant said quietly. "They'll strafe us if they get through."

We inflated our lifebelts and waited. They never got through. We were glad. We'd seen two sharks just before dusk.

At midnight the control boat appeared out of the darkness. We were to try again.

Watch Hulk of Jap Ship for Snipers

We inched toward the dock, partially wrecked by our own shelling. The hulk of a Japanese merchantman loomed to the right. Two direct hits from our destroyers had put it out of action. On the lookout for snipers, we covered it with our machine guns.

When we reached the dock, snipers in the wrecked ship opened up, but they were firing over our heads. We climbed on the dock and more snipers fired. We hit the deck. We moved down the dock 10 feet. Japs on the beach began throwing mortars our way. We hit the deck again.

Minutes later a second mortar hit directly beneath us. I felt the blast and was sprayed with salt water.

Someone yelled: "Get to the other side! The next one will be right on!"

We were uncertain where to go. The Jap lines were only 50 yards

Well Over 2000 Planes Delivered, Knox Announces

By John G. Norris

More bad news for the Japs came out of the Navy Department last night—an announcement that about a dozen aircraft carriers and "well over" 2000 naval planes were completed and delivered in November for the best production month in naval history.

Secretary Knox released "with pride" the record output figures, and emphasized that most of the ships and planes completed during the past month were combatant types.

Just short of 2000 fighters and bombers were built in November, and of the more than a quarter-million tons of naval ships finished, "by far" the greatest percentage were fighting ships, he stated.

Commenting on recent action in the Pacific, the Navy chief declared that the prelanding bombardment of Tarawa Island far exceeded anything of the sort in all history.

He reported that 2900 tons of shells and bombs were poured on Betio Isle—the airfield and defended portion of Tarawa Atoll—plus millions of machine-gun bullets. Betio, Knox noted, is less than 1 square mile, while in the heaviest Allied air raids on Berlin, 2300 tons of bombs have been dropped over a much larger area.

Tarawa In Short Tons

(The Tarawa figure of 2200 tons of shells and 700 tons of bombs is in short tons, 2000 pounds, while the German raid totals are in long tons, 2240 pounds.)

Knox gave this data in answer to what he said was the "criticism of some arm-chair strategists" that the heavy casualties in the Gilberts were due to the Navy underestimating Tarawa's strength and not preparing for it.

He said that it is impossible to get a completely accurate picture of the strength of ground defenses from aerial photographs, and declared that the Jap pill boxes were so heavily built of concrete and steel and virtually buried in the sand that they were able to withstand the terrific bombardment they received.

The Navy chief drew a comparison between the three-day battle

Stalin, Roosevelt, Churchill Agree On Plans for War Against Germany

London (Saturday), Dec. 4 (AP).—President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin in the greatest such meeting in history have confered at Teheran, the capital of Iran (Persia), and agreed upon both military and political plans for the war against Germany, Moscow radio announced today in the first official disclosure of the parley.

Cutting through numerous Axis and neutral reports of the "Big Three" meeting, Moscow stated officially that the talks were held "a few days ago," and that "diplomatic and military representatives took part."

"At the conference," said the official Moscow broadcast, "questions on the conduct of the war against Germany were discussed as well as a number of political questions.

"Corresponding decisions were adopted which will be made public later."

The Soviet monitor stated that full details of the conference might be announced between noon and 2 p. m. (EWT) today, basing this prediction on the usual routine of the Moscow radio when announcing future broadcasts.

The announcement from Mos-

By the Associated Press

The Moscow radio's "scoop" on the Roosevelt-Churchill-Stalin conference left American information officials flabbergasted that the news was not made available simultaneously in other capitals.

Elmer Davis, chief of the Office of War Information, said:

"We hope that the next time Allied leaders meet we can make arrangements to spill everything simultaneously. It is a difficult thing to do because it involves arrangements with two or three powers, although we did succeed in the case of the recent Moscow conference. We'll do the best we can."

cow came as a surprise to British officials. The Ministry of Information said it had no official announcement of the conference. Bulletins from London, where the broadcast was monitored, were delayed briefly by censors for a check by the ministry—more evidence of the element of surprise.

It has been widely reported that the three Allied leaders, in addition to mapping the strategy of the land, sea and air war against Germany, would agree upon a political program for the treatment of defeated Nazidom and also perhaps formulate a propaganda war to be aimed at the German people immediately.

Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill went to the Iran conference from their historic five-day meeting in North Africa with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, which was concerned primarily with the war against Japan. That meeting, held from November 22 through November 26, was attended by a galaxy of military and naval authorities who presumably journeyed on with their leaders.

Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill journeyed many miles to Teheran. Stalin, making his first

1000 Four-Engined Bombers Produced During November

By Ben W. Gilbert

The enormous impact on the enemy of our aircraft production was emphasized yesterday with the announcement by War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson that this country made more than 1000 four-engined bombers last month.

Production of all types reached 8789 planes—97 per cent of schedule, and 427 more than October in spite of the handicap of a one-day shorter month and the two holidays of Armistice and Thanksgiving days.

The November figure raised total aircraft production for the year thus far to 76,876 and made it extremely likely that 1943 total production would exceed 85,000 by a good margin.

"Scheduling and production follow-up policies instituted and carried out by the Aircraft Production Board (headed by WPB Vice Chairman Charles E. Wilson) have borne fruit," Nelson said.

"During the 30 days in November, airplanes rolled off the United States production lines continuously day and night, faster than one every five minutes.

Nelson said the spirit shown in providing full output on Thanks-

Bulgarian Troop Revolt Reported

Finns Seen Determined To Fight On

Stockholm, Dec. 3 (AP).—Finland apparently has determined to fight on against Russia as a full partner of Germany, abandoning her former propaganda line that she was engaged in a private war not connected with the world struggle, a reliable informant said today.

This policy was said to have been decided upon after the Moscow conference of Allied foreign ministers, which the Finns interpreted as meaning only unconditional surrender for Finland. Cabinet members were pictured as finding that completely unacceptable, preferring to fight on if necessary even after the Axis has surrendered.

Advices reaching Stockholm said Finnish newspapers had been instructed not to mention the theme of a separate war, and stricter censorship was reported imposed. Recently there had been renewed reports that Finland was seeking peace.

New German pressure on the Finns also is reflected in such a stand.

Toivo Kivimaeki, Minister to Berlin, was said to have been called home for consultation after the Moscow meeting, and to have told a secret session of the parliamentary foreign affairs committee that "we must please the Germans. There has been too much pro-Ally tendency and too much anti-German demonstration."

German papers have been praising Finland lately, and the Reich has agreed to supply Finland tens of thousands of tons of grain and sugar by January 1.

Reverberations of Moscow Pact Seen In Yugoslavia

London, Dec. 3 (AP).—A break in morale and revolt among some of Germany's Bulgarian mercenaries helping Hitler's battle in Yugoslavia was reported today by the Yugoslav Partisans as they fought on against Nazi legions being constantly reinforced for a showdown along the eastern Adriatic.

A broadcast communique from Gen. Josip Broz (Tito) declared that on the Serbian-Bosnian frontier, Bulgarian soldiers had refused orders of their German commanders to fight, and that the Nazis had disarmed an entire battalion of Bulgarians in one instance.

mans themselves regard Bulgaria the possibility of exaggeration—received the news with interest, for it could represent a crack in the dam Hitler has built to keep the Allied flood out of the Balkans.

It is regarded as significant also in view of the fact that the German another connection: :

as the weakest point in their Balkan flank, and doubly significant in another connection: :

That is the Roosevelt-Churchill-Stalin conference which reports from abroad declare already is under way, and the fact that Bulgaria has long had close tie with Russia, strained though they have been by Bulgarian cooperation with Hitler. Strong enough word from Stalin might take the Bulgarians wholly out of the war.

Tito's communique declared the Germans had been thrown on the defensive in Bosnia, which fronts on the middle Adriatic, after 15 days of bitter fighting, and also had been forced back in the main Croatian sector. In Dalmatia, the Nazis were reported massing in strong force at Metkovic.

Along the perimeter of the German defense, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's sea and air forces threw in new attacks from the Italian theater in support of the Yugoslavs—a bomberdment by British destroyers on the man enemy-held port of Durazzo in nearby Albania, and bomber assaults on German shipping off the Yugoslav coast.

bers and fighters were wiping out these strong points.

Liberators winged north to bomb Bolzano on the Brenner Pass railroad and British destroyers bombarded Durazzo in Albania by night.

Front dispatches said the Fifth Army's drive in the Calabritto area yesterday was the biggest Allied offensive since the landing at Salerno—presumably on a larger scale than the Eighth Army's successful smash at Sangro Ridge earlier in the week. The Germans were reported resisting fiercely, and official advices were extremely reserved on how far Clark's Army progressed.

Clark directed the attack from such an advanced point that he came under enemy artillery fire for some time, a half-dozen shells falling near where he was standing.

Bomber Output Hailed by Nelson

giving Day was "commendable."

Prior to Nelson's announcement, precise figures on the number of bombers being produced were kept a closely guarded secret. Their release at this time, following the heightened air offensive against Hitler's "Fortress Europa," should convince the enemy that we have the planes to keep it up.

Additional highlighting of the increasing emphasis on offensive combat planes was provided by Nelson's disclosure that total weight of planes produced increased 7 per cent over October, with the average weight of each airplane produced in November more than double the July, 1940, average.

Total weight of November's production (including spare parts) was 81.5 million pounds, Nelson said, compared to 2.3 million pounds in July, 1940, an increase of 35 times in 3:1-3 years.

MacArthur, Curtin See Long Struggle

Canberra, Dec. 3 (AP).—Prime Minister John Curtin of Australia announced today he had held a conference with Gen. Douglas MacArthur, in which they discussed the Cairo conference of Allied leaders, brought the realizaztion today that the final offensive in the Pacific must await the smashing of the Hitler war machine in Europe.

The Australian Premier said their discussions "had particular reference to 'prolonged operations' and were conditioned by joint realization that final victory in the Pacific must largely wait on events in Europe."

The Premier made it clear offensive operations would be pressed against the Japanese. These would involve "diversions, regroupings and endless adjustments over the entire national economy" of Australia.

Australia's war effort "will always be the maximum" of which she is capable, he declared.

for Tarawa and the battle for Midway in June, 1942, which lasted a like period. He noted that we gave the superior Jap attacking fleet a terrific beating at Midway, sinking four enemy carriers and many other ships, while we lost only one ship at Tarawa—the escort carrier Liscombe Bay.

Asked how the American Fleet which invaded the Gilberts compared with the 80-ship armada the Japs sent against Midway, Knox said he would make no direct comparison, but then added:

"If the Japs had brought their whole fleet from Truk to defend Tarawa, we'd have been delighted."

The Navy Secretary also disclosed that since November 22, American planes have been raiding the Jap bases on Bougainville, Buka and Shortland Islands—their remaining airdromes in the Solomons—without a single enemy plane rising to combat our attacks. We have lost four planes during this period to antiaircraft fire.

Knox presented the Navy production report with the aid of Vice Admiral S. M. Robinson, Navy procurement chief, and Rear Admiral DeWitt C. Ramsey, chief of the bureau of aeronautics. They disclosed:

That of the "about a dozen" flattops turned out in November, eight were escort carriers, and the remainder first-line craft. Production of fighter planes was "especially pleasing."

Escort Goal About Met

A record was also scored in the construction of destroyer escorts. President Roosevelt's goal of 260 such craft during this year will have been met this weekend, despite early delays. About 300 DE's in all will be built in 1943.

Bottlenecks in ship and plane production have been fairly well eliminated, though in some areas there are shortages of skilled labor. The much brighter construction picture, it was said, is at least partially due to the increasing degree of skill among workers in yards and plants.

While Army war expenditures will level off next year and probably even decrease, Navy expenditures will continue to mount. Army manpower and production goals are reaching planned totals, while the tonnage of combatant ships finished next year will exceed this year's total, Knox said in explanation.

Berlin Like Badly-Built City With Lights On, Murrow Says

New York, Dec. 3 (AP).—In the midst of the big RAF raid Thursday night Berlin looked like "a badly laid out city with the street lights on" to Edward R. Murrow, CBS correspondent, as he stood in a Lancaster heavy bomber over the burning German capital.

"In a little more than half an hour," Murrow said in a broadcast from London tonight, "Berlin had received about three times the weight of bombs that had fallen on London in the course of a long winter night." He was in London through the blitz of 1940-41.

Lowell Bennett of International News Service, who, as a pool correspondent, also represented other American news services on the mission, and Norman Stockton of the Sydney (Australia) Sun, also flew on the raid, but they failed to return.

Murrow's plane flew through antiaircraft fire and fighter opposition long before it got over the target. "Jock," the pilot, said "there's a kite on fire dead ahead," and Murrow observed:

"It was a great golden slow-moving meteor slanting towards the earth. By this time we were about 30 miles from our target area in Berlin. That 30 miles was the longest flight I have ever made . . .

"Off to starboard another kite went down in flames. The flares were spouting all over the sky, reds and greens and yellows, and we were flying straight for the center of the fireworks."

A little later: "Another Lanc (Lancaster-Bomber) was coned (caught in the searchlights) on our starboard beam. The lights seemed to be supporting it. Again we could see those little bubbles of colored lead on two sides. The German fighters were at him. And then with no warning at all, the D-Dog (Murrow's plane) was filled with an unhealthy white light . . .

Jock's "quiet Scot's voice beat into my ears, 'steady, lads, we've been coned.' . . . He jammed the control column forward, and to the left. We were going down. Jock was wearing woolen gloves with the fingers cut off. I could see his finger nails turning white as he gripped the wheel . . . My knees should have been strong enough to support me, but they weren't. And the stomach seemed in some danger of letting me down too. I picked myself up and looked out again. It seemed that one big searchlight; instead of being 20,000 feet below, was mounted on our wing tip. D-dog was corkscrewing. . . ."

Back in England at last, Murrow concluded: "Berlin was a kind of orchestrated hell, a terrible symphony of light and flame. It isn't a pleasant kind of warfare. The men doing it speak of it as a job. It's terribly tiring. Men die in the skies while others are roasted alive in their cellars."

WHY ON EARTH DO THEY DO IT?

. . . let time slip by without making an accurate insurance check-up

When a policyholder has a loss and finds, too late, that his insurance wasn't up to scratch, the chances are he was "going to" have it checked up—but never got around to it.

Moral: Don't you get caught that way. Give us a ring today and let us go over your insurance. Then you'll KNOW what's what.

past the end of the pier, and there was no command post.

Matjasic and I discarded our typewriter, our packs and our field glasses and started to the shore.

The last 75 yards of the pier was white coral grit. There was a brilliant moon—at home I would have called it beautiful. We swore at it viciously. We were perfect targets.

We Can't Stay Here

Crouched, we sprinted down the pier, silhouetted against the coral. Snipers opened up, and six men fell, screaming in agony. We lay like logs.

"We can't stay here," someone said up the line, "they'll shell hell out of us and we'll all be gone."

"Advance slowly. Five feet between each man. They won't get us all that way."

We started. Three more Marines fell, and we hit the ground. Inch by inch we moved up. Each 10 yards cost us the lives of more Marines. Each time I expected to get mine. Finally we were within 15 yards of the beach. Ahead were shadows.

"Throw away everything, including your camera," I told Matjasic. "We'll come back and get it if we can. We're making a run for it."

A sergeant beside me cracked: "Take your rifle. You'll probably never get to use it, but you might."

I grinned. Ray and I ran for the shadows. It was an anticlimax. Not a shot was fired at us.

On the beach the fire was still hot. We ducked behind the wreckage of a Japanese steam roller, which appeared to be between us and the enemy. I found a shovel and began frantically to dig. Within five minutes we had our first foxhole on Tarawa. It turned out to be the safest spot on the island.

There we spent the night. It was 4 a. m. when we got to lie down.

At dawn we found our position precarious. Our own men were on the left of us, the Japs not more than 50 yards on the right. We were in No Man's Land.

At 6 a. m. a fight began over our foxhole. Scores of bullets nicked off the big steam roller, while we burrowed deeper.

Shortly before noon the Japs were driven back, and we came out of hiding.

Our cruisers and destroyers resumed their shelling of the Jap half of the island, knocking out the last remaining big guns. The concussion was terrific, for the shells were landing not more than 100 yards away. Our planes came in strafing.

I waded and swam through a small bay to reach the opposite shore, but was unable to find anyone. Virtually everyone I knew was reported dead or missing.

Far down the beach (not more than 50 yards, but it took me two hours to cover it) I saw a Marine with a camera. Painfully I crawled to him, for my body was one mass of bruises.

He was a stranger.

"Where'd you get it?" I asked.

"From Lucas," he replied.

"Where is Lucas?" I asked.

"Over there," he replied.

"Dead."

"I'm Lucas," I told him.

From his description, I decided he meant Sergt. Ernest J. Diet, 36, Hammond, La. Later, I found a body I thought was that of our sergeant photographer. I was almost hysterical when Diet showed up 24 hours later. He learned finally that it was some one else's camera and that he had found some of my papers. But, meanwhile, he had officially reported me killed in action.

I left my foxhole at noon, went 100 yards, and returned at 6 p. m. It was that tough.

The night was hellish. More men came in, and more were killed on the pier. I slept until 1 a. m., and Matjasic from 1 a. m. until dawn. We had had enough experience with the enemy's infiltration tactics. We had orders to shoot any man who came toward us. During the night we learned that guards on the pier killed a Jap who had sneaked in with a drum of gasoline, intending to set the pier afire. It would have been the end of us, for the pier was loaded with high explosives.

At dawn, the enemy sent its first bombers. There were only two of them, and five men were killed.

We awoke to one of the strangest sights in history. We badly needed replacements. Men were being landed 500 yards from shore in the surf at low tide and were wading in past enemy machine gun emplacements. Many men fell before they reached shore. In the afternoon Marines, were still staggering ashore, carrying the limp form of buddies between them.

The heaviest fire came from a Jap sniper's nest in the beached enemy merchant ship. Assault waves were held up while our dive bombers went to work on it, dropping high explosives in its hulk. And yet, when the next boat came in, machine gun fire continued from the blazing ship. We settled the matter by sending aboard men to wipe out the snipers in hand-to-hand combat, and to hold it as an outpost.

Shortly before noon, the Japs opened up on us with mortars. One landed near enough to tear the top off our steam roller, and to deafen me for two days. A Marine who occupied the foxhole next to ours was killed by shrapnel. We dug deeper.

By now, however, the Japs were being forced steadily back. We were able to move about. Snipers continued, but we ignored them. One was killed in a coconut tree 50 feet away.

Still, our naval and air poundings continued. On the third day the heaviest fighting took place in a cleared space around the air strip. One of our tanks lumbered into the clearing. A Jap broke from the bush and tried to throw a grenade in its tracks. He was shot down.

Suddenly there was firing at our rear. Seven Japs had been found in the ruins of a dugout less than 10 feet from the command post from which our officers were directing the operations. They were wiped out.

I went with Chief Pharmacist's Mate Roy J. Barnhill, 33, Salt Lake City, Utah, to the front where our men are blasting out a Jap pillbox. Last night Barnhill went back to the Jap lines to pick up six wounded Marines. A Japanese sentry tossed two hand grenades in their direction. Both were duds.

I returned to the beach to find snipers again sweeping the pier where ammunition was being unloaded. They fired from the wreckage of one of our boats 50 yards away. I ducked into the water on the opposite side, and found five husky military policemen herding a convoy of Japanese prisoners toward the beach in water up to their waists and up to the Japs' shoulders. Three dead marines were in the water. The MP's herded the Japs out to a waiting landing barge. As the frightened prisoners climbed aboard, they were subjected to murderous fire from their own snipers. Three were killed.

I got back in time to be in on the battle that broke Japanese resistance on Tarawa. Several hundred Japs were holed up for two days in a bomb-proof shelter at the end of the airstrip, holding up our advance.

Flame Thrower Did It

Pfc. Robert Harper, 22, Houston, Tex., and Sergt. John Rybin, 25, Laurel, Mont., dashed forward with their flame throwers while automatic riflemen covered them. At the entrance of the bomb shelter, Harper threw his flame on a Jap machine gun nest, charring three enemy marines beyond recognition. He poured on more fire. There were screams inside the shelter, and the marines rushed forward to capture their objective.

Harper returned to our post.

"They were all huddled in there scared to death," he said. "I turned on the heat and that was all."

From this point on our advance was rapid. Following our advancing troops, I came upon one position we had held less than five minutes and counted 27 Japanese who had committed suicide by strapping their feet to the triggers of their rifles, placing the muzzle in their chests and pulling the trigger with a kick.

During the night, the Japs made a final desperate bayonet charge. They killed two of our flame throwers but were repulsed.

And this morning, the island was secured. For the first time we were able to sit up without ducking. There were a few desultory sniper shots, but no one noticed them.

Staff Sergt. George Stutsman, Natchez, Miss., brought us two cartons of cigarettes and a carton of matches. We got a five gallon keg of water—a real luxury. It rained briefly, and we stood in the open, soaped and showered ourselves off.

This was civilization.

The Moscow radio made the announcement in an official Soviet news agency broadcast for provincial papers. The announcer introduced it by saying "I am about to broadcast a statement to be inserted in every newspaper."

The broadcast said:

"A few days ago in Teheran, a conference took place between the leaders of the three Allied powers, President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin. Diplomatic and military representatives took part in the conference.

"At the conference, questions on the conduct of the war against Germany were discussed as well as a number of political questions.

For the third straight day the war bulletin made no mention of the fighting in the important Kiev bulge area, and the Germans intimated that fighting was diminishing there. In this sector the Germans have mounted a counteroffensive which has overrun the important railway junctions of Zhitomir and Korosten.

The Germans declared further that Russian troops had lashed out anew in the north with the fourth assault in as many days down the Smolensk road to Orsha and Minsk—this time screening their attacking infantry with flame throwing tanks.

Debate Postpones Many Dads in Draft

Induction Boards Await Outcome of Issue at Capitol

The effect of congressional debate on the fathers' draft has been to postpone the induction of at least 100,000 fathers until next year, informed officials stated yesterday.

Before the debate over drafting pre-Pearl Harbor fathers began this autumn, Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service, advised local draft boards that schedules called for the drafting of 446,000 fathers during the months of October, November and December.

Present indications are that draft boards, reluctant to draft fathers until Congress had a chance to act, will fall behind by an estimated 100,000 before the year expires.

It has already been disclosed that the January draft call will remain in the neighborhood of 300,000—the present level—instead of dropping off sharply after January 1 as previously expected.

Because draft board calls are set 60 days ahead of time, the lag in father inductions in October will not be made up before January. It can now be stated that February calls will have to allow for a substantial lag in November, with the likelihood of the lag carrying over in part to March.

As a result, it is doubtful that the Army will reach peak strength before March 1 or possibly even April 1, instead of the January 1 date previously set. Schedules previously called for a peak Army of 7.7 millions by the end of this year, with calls during the first half of next year providing only for Army replacements to maintain peak strength and continued expansion of the Navy to a July 1, 1944 peak.

In finally passing a measure, Congress failed to place a legislative prohibition on the drafting of pre-Pearl Harbor fathers, although draft boards were left in confusion while the legislation was pending.

The measure which also would divorce Selective Service from the War Manpower Commission was sent to the White House on November 27 and would, in the normal course of events, have to be acted on by President Roosevelt in 10 days—by December 9 if allowance is made for Sundays.

Fascist Unity

Spain Aids Axis, Asserts Gil Robles

London, Dec. 3 (AP).—Open letters—one of which charges the Spanish government with outright war aid to the Germans, including assistance of U-boats—are being circulated in Spain, demanding the resignation of Generalissimo Francisco Franco, and restoration of the monarchy to save the nation from the "approaching catastrophe" of pro-German policy.

Outstanding among these letters, said information reaching London from inside Spain, are two written by Jose Maria Gil Robles, former leader of the Federation of Rightist Parties, now living in Portugal.

In them, Gil Robles asserts that the Spanish government had supplied German submarines in Spanish waters, placed bombs in British ships in Spanish ports, and installed wireless stations near Gibraltar to "advise German submarines of movements of Allied convoys, causing serious losses at the most critical moments in the Battle of Malta, etc."

Gil Robles declared it was ridiculous to assume that the Allies would leave the Franco regime in power once Nazism and Fascism were crushed.

If Spain "goes to the peace table under the present political situation, her seat will be on the bench of the conquered," he said.

Franco has shown no inclination to bow to demands to resign, and has even rebuked his highest generals who told him the time had come to put Prince Juan, third son of King Alfonso, on the throne.

Prince Juan, Gil Robles added, "is absolutely decided to act, and will do so very soon."

4 More Men From D.C. Area Die in Action

Four more Washington area men have been killed in action, it was learned here yesterday.

The parents of Staff Sergt. Charles T. Scott of Alexandria and of Pvt. Alvin Rogers of Engleside, in Fairfax County, have been notified by the War Department that their sons have been killed while the War Department yesterday announced the death of Pvt. Ernest H. Carneal of Alexandria and of Pvt. Wilbur W. Jackson, who lived at 1242 Carrollburg pl. sw.

SCOTT

Reported missing in action northwest of Hannover, Germany, since July 26, Staff Sergt. Scott has been "determined killed," according to word received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Emmett C. Scott of 21 West Myrtle st., Alexandria. Overseas since June 15, he was a tail gunner on a Flying Fortress that was seen to catch fire and crash in a raid on Hannover, his father said. Known as "Dinky," Sergt. Scott attended George Washington High School, where he was a four-letter athlete, winning honors in basketball, football, baseball and track.

Buried in Italy

Pvt. Alvin Rogers, 22, was killed in action in the Mediterranean theater on November 5, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Rogers of Ingleside, have been informed. The Army telegram stated that he died of wounds received in the same day and was buried in Italy.

Born in Engelside, Pvt. Rogers attended public schools in Fairfax County and later had secondary schooling in Richmond. He entered the Army in October, 1942, and received his basic training at Camp Lee, later being sent to Georgia.

Killed October 19

Pvt. Carneal, 21, a veteran of the campaigns in North Africa and Sicily, was killed in Italy on October 19 and was buried there, the War Department telegram notified his father, Herbert Carneal of 1113 Prince st., Alexandria. Born in Caroline County below Fredericksburg, Va., Pvt. Carneal moved with his father and two younger brothers to Alexandria three years ago.

Pvt. Jackson, the brother of Miss Dorothy P. Jackson, an employe of the Bureau of Engraving, was killed while stationed in the Mediterranean combat zone.

States Clinch Control of Soldier Vote

partisan limitations on a supervisory war ballots commission, but never touching the central Federal ballot provision until yesterday.

Yesterday the coalition ripped into this. Net result of the action leaves it entirely up to the States whether registration and poll-tax requirements will be waived for soldiers, and whether States having absentee-vote laws will send ballots to soldiers.

Sponsored Jointly

The substitute, sponsored jointly by Senators Eastland of Mississippi, McClellan of Arkansas and McKellar of Tennessee, simply "recommends" to the States that their legislatures enact legislation enabling members of the armed forces, Merchant Marine and Red Cross, who are eligible to vote under State law, to cast an absentee ballot.

The ineffectual 1942 soldier vote law, under which only 27,000 servicemen cast valid ballots, went farther than this by waiving soldier registration and poll-tax requirements.

Adoption of the substitute was managed by ready acceptance of a number of Republican amendments previously written into the Federal war ballot bill.

Flushed with his victory, Senator Eastland told newsmen: "This vote has forever put an end to enactment of anti-poll-tax legislation. We've got the votes now to block cloture."

Lucas Sounds Warning

Bitter in defeat, Senator Lucas (Democrat) of Illinois, whose Federal bill was scrapped, told reporters:

"The adoption of the Eastland amendment was the hardest blow that was ever struck at the political rights of a soldier in wartime . . . Those who favored the passage of this amendment will have to accept the responsibility to the soldiers, their fathers, their mothers, wives and friends."

Before scuttling the Green-Lucas bill, the Senate rejected, 50 to 30, a proposal by Senator Danaher (Republican) of Connecticut allowing servicemen to cast their votes by proxy, by designating someone back home to vote their wishes.

Carried over into the Eastland substitute was the Taft amendment—only really new legislation embraced in the coalition bill. This forbids any Government agency from distributing any political propaganda to servicemen, and guarantees "equal time" to all parties in rebroadcasts of political speeches over Government-controlled radio stations.

Also picked up from the original bill was the Aiken amendment, including the Red Cross in the war ballot, and the Pepper amendment, including the Merchant Marine.

Southern Democrats, who termed the Scott-Lucas Federal War Ballot an invasion of States rights and a violation of the Constitution, meanwhile were reported to have gained the upper hand on the House Elections Committee, considering similar legislation.

The Senate-passed substitute recommends that State officials utilize absentee balloting procedures "to the greatest possible extent," and advises the States to prepare postal cards on which servicemen could write home for an absentee ballot. The Secretaries of War and Navy would be directed "whenever practicable and compatible with military operations" to deliver the cards to servicemen expeditiously and to cooperate with State officers in distribution, execution, collection and return of absentee ballots.

Film Actress Blamed for Dull Day at MacDill

The commanding officer of MacDill Field, Fla., agrees with Laraine Day that her visit to his post was not an unqualified success, but says it was her own fault.

Miss Day complained to the Hollywood Victory Committee last Monday that when she visited MacDill Field and other Army posts, her time was monopolized by the officers, to the exclusion of the enlisted men.

In a report to the War Department disclosed yesterday, Col. James B. Carroll, MacDill commander, gave a detailed account of arrangements to make a mutually satisfactory schedule. After some uncertainity as to whether Miss Day felt like making any tour of the camp, the report set out, a revised and shortened program was agreed upon and followed.

Attached to the report was an editorial from the post newspaper entitled "MacDill entertains Laraine Day" and telling of a soldier show which wound up the day. The editorial said:

"Came the big moment. A roll of drums, a blare of bugles, and the beautiful and no doubt talented young star gracefully made her entrance. We had no chance to judge her talent. She told one joke; told a second; then just as gracefully made her exit.

"We sincerely hope that Miss Day's visit to MacDill was a pleasant one, and that she enjoyed the entertainment."

Navy Abandons Hotel Project

Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox yesterday informed Senator Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia officially that l'affaire Chastleton Hotel is closed. Byrd asked if the hotel was to be taken over as WAVE barracks. Knox replied:

"After some study this project has been abandoned."

Put Hitler In Asylum, Author Urges

Indianapolis, Dec. 3 (AP).—Booth Tarkington, famed Indiana author, presented his own answer today to the question of what to do with Hitler after the war—he proposed the Nazi leader and his henchmen be locked in psychiatric hospitals.

Tarkington, just returned to his Indiana home from his summer place at Kennebunkport, Me., said death to the Nazi leaders would simply boost them into "Siegfriedian martyrdom" and in prison "they would still be martyrs and every German heart would burn."

"Think of the leveling effect on the German people," he said, "to get weekly bulletins from the hospitals reporting the progress of the patients. They would read something like this: 'Adolf Hitler took a walk today and appeared better. He talked quite sanely at times.'"

The Hoosier author chuckled as he added, "We all need sobering up after an emotional debauch. Nothing would sober Germany so fast as my method."

Galbreath to Aid Bricker's Campaign

Columbus, Ohio, Dec. 3 (AP).—John W. Galbreath of Columbus, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, today was named financial director and treasurer of Gov. John W. Bricker's campaign for the Republican presidential nomination.

Bricker said Galbreath would share with Roy D. Moore, Canton, Ohio, newspaper publisher named earlier this week as campaign chairman, responsibility of directing the drive.

Sidelights on the War

Argentina Seen Fearing Action

Montevideo, Dec. 3 (AP).—The newspaper La Razon says it has learned Argentina may ask Uruguay to intern Argentine political exiles here on grounds that they are being armed by the United States and will attempt a revolt in Argentina.

La Razon says Argentina's "indiscreet idea was provoked by the knowledge that the Radical Party planned to hold its national convention in Montevideo in view of the fact it would be prevented from holding its convention in Buenos Aires in December as scheduled."

La Razon asserted fewer than three score Argentine exiles live in this country.

5 Mayors Back Subsidy Payments

By Christine Sadler

Indications the Senate Banking Committee will compromise with food subsidies by reporting out a bill allowing their continuance within specific channels grew more pronounced yesterday as mayors from five large urban areas sketched the plight of city governments unable to raise salaries of their employes and spoke out for "white-collared consumers."

Senator Mahoney (Democrat) of Connecticut assured Mayor LaGuardia subsidies would be continued—and explained later he felt sure the committee would rewrite the House-approved measure to outlaw most Government food payments after December 31.

When Mayor Cornelius D. Scully of Pittsburgh declared the price-control structure must be maintained "even if it takes subsidies," Senator Maybank (Democrat) of South Carolina replied, "Well, I agree with you."

A constant question asked by Senators was, "What do the people in your area think of OPA?" pointing up the belief some Congressmen have that to support the price and ration agency openly is to lose votes.

Mayor Cooper Green of Birmingham admitted OPA is unpopular down his way, but said, "I think everybody believes, however, that it has done a pretty good job."

Senator Taft (Republican) of Ohio tangled with Boston's Mayor Maurice Tobin when the latter said he thought it might be well to roll back prices 5 per cent "if that could be done for two billion dollars, as I'm told it could."

"There can be no good argument advanced for a rollback subsidy of any kind," Taft declared. "I can see a subsidy to hold prices, maybe, and to promote production, but I for one, will be strictly against a rollback."

Senator Wagner (Democrat) of New York, chairman of the committee, declared he thought subsidies a much better tool than a food stamp plan "which would make paupers of consumers unfortunate enough to have their salaries frozen."

Mayor George Walsh of Grand Rapids declared he believed a good price-control job had been done in this war.

Mayor Scully declared, "When men like Secretary of the Navy Knox and Donald Nelson and Chester Bowles ask for the subsidy, that is proof to me 'subsidy' is not an immoral word. You can't say of any of them that he is either an ex-college professor or a Democrat."

"It seems a little odd to me," he said, "that Republicans should suddenly be against subsidies, and I can't see how anyone who favors subsidies for railroads and subsidies for the merchant marine and everything else can object 'on principle' to subsidies to fight inflation."

Aussie Forces Close In on Japs' Strong Huon Base

Southwest Pacific Headquarters, (Saturday) Dec. 4 (AP).—Australian jungle troops, supported by artillery, are closing in on Wareo, a Japanese stronghold on the Huon Peninsula of northeastern New Guinea.

Wareo is inland approximately 11 miles northwest of coastal Finschhafen, the base which the Allies captured October 2.

To the east, just across narrow waters from the peninsula, MacArthur's bombers continued to hit at targets on New Britain.

For the second straight day, Borgen Bay's dumps and supply barges were the targets.

In the northern Solomons, the bombers of Admiral William F. Halsey hit the enemy's Kara airdrome on the south coast of Bougainville and the Ballale airdrome on an island just off the coast with 57 tons of bombs. These enemy bases have been bypassed by Americans now holding a beachhead at Empress Augusta Bay.

Crude Rubber Use Tightened As WPB Relaxes on Synthetics

The War Production Board yesterday clamped down on use of the Nation's dwindling stockpile of crude rubber, but at the same time relaxed restrictions on some synthetics.

A revised order, incorporating all directives was issued in the past four months by the Office of the Rubber Director, on one hand reflects increased production of synthetic rubber and the rapid conversion of the rubber industry from the use of crude to synthetic.

On the other hand, WPB's order prohibits the use of natural rubber in the manufacture of several hundred products previously made from the crude.

The order, it was said, will also change the appearance of "Victory" tires and may indirectly increase the supply of chilte—an ingredient used in the manufacture of chewing gum.

"General purpose synthetics"—Buna S and Neoprene—may now be used in unlimited quantities where they are permitted in making products. Special types of synthetics—including Neoprene types ILS and FR, Hycar OS-10 and Styraloy have been placed under direct allocation for specialized industrial and military uses.

All quota restrictions on the use of reclaimed rubber are removed by the WPB order.

A synthetic called Thiokol N, which has been found unsuited for general use, is being made available to manufacturers unrestricted to encourage experimentation in new uses.

A a result of a provision banning the use of "extras" in tire production, new tires will appear shortly "in the rough." No time will be allowed for the removal of surface imperfections not affecting serviceability.

Chilte, the gummy material imported from South America, was removed from controls of the order, since it has been found unsuited to essential rubber products.

Senate Group Defends Rail Pay Proposal

The Senate Interstate Commerce Committee yesterday filed with the Senate a crisp denial that the projected flat 8-cents-an-hour pay increase for nonoperating rail employes "violates or even modifies the 'Little Steel' formula."

The favorable report on the Truman resolution granting the pay increase, approved several days ago by the committee, was submitted to the Senate by Senator Edwin C. Johnson (Democrat) of Colorado.

Senator Harry S. Truman (Democrat) of Missouri, meanwhile, introduced a strengthening amendment to his own resolution and said his motion to call up the measure will be made in the Senate Tuesday.

Vinson Orders "Nullified"

The amendment specifically "annulled" orders of Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson setting aside findings of the May 24 emergency board in favor of the 8-cent pay increase.

The effect of the amendment would be to automatically put into operation the May 24 emergency board 8-cent pay raise, which Vinson set aside in favor of a second board's 4- to 10-cent sliding scale recommendations.

Another effect of this latest amendment, if adopted, would be to grant the 8-cent increase to 100 per cent of the nonoperating employes. Only about 95 per cent were covered in the August 7 agreement between labor and management, which the committee resolution validates. The emergency board finding had covered all.

Included in Johnson's report to the Senate was Vinson's recent letter to a Senate subcommittee protesting that congressional action in favor of the 8-cent increase would scrap the "Little Steel" formula and force him to abandon it.

Plan to Set Strike Date

Heads of the five operating railway brotherhoods, meanwhile, decided to meet in Cleveland December 15 to announce the operating unions' strike vote and to set a strike date.

The operating brotherhoods, like the 15 nonoperating unions, rejected Vinson's sliding scale formula and have been taking a strike vote, but only the nonoperating unions have taken their case to Congress. The latter group has made no plans to announce its strike vote or fix a strike date, pending action by Congress.

David B. Robertson of the Brotherhood of Firemen and Enginemen, one of the five operating chiefs who conferred briefly yesterday with National Mediation Board Chairman William E. Leiserson, said tabulation of the operating strike vote is not complete, but is "in all probability a high vote for a strike."

The committee report filed by Johnson with the Senate yesterday said the railway brotherhoods "have, with great patience, exhausted all possibilities of executive action in aid of validation of the agreement (labor-management agreement on 8 cents), satisfactory alike to carriers and employes."

"We have reached the conclusion," the report said, "that the agreement of August 7, 1943, is a valid agreement made under, and in accordance with, the Railway Labor Act . . . particularly we find that it is in conformity with the principles and requirements of the Stabilization Act."

The report praised the entire railroad transportation system for doing "a magnificent job under the pressure of war conditions."

West Coast Plan Cuts Shipworker Need

Manpower Chief Paul V. McNutt announced yesterday that anticipated labor requirements of West Coast shipyards had been slashed by 97,000 workers as a result of the imposition of employment ceilings on West Coast plants in line with the regional "labor budget" program placed in effect in mid-September.

McNutt said the employment reduction was accomplished without any substantial reduction in war contracts let in the region.

The Gallup Poll

Texas Remains Strongly Democratic Although GOP Has Gained Since 1932

By George Gallup

Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Dec. 3.—If any State south of the Mason-Dixon line is to be wooed away from the Democrats by the GOP the State of Texas would be the richest prize.

Wendell Willkie's recent visit there highlights Republican hopes in the Lone Star State. Texas is not only the most important Southern State in terms of electoral votes, but it went Republican once—in the Hoover-Smith campaign of 1928. Many of Texas's legislative Representatives in Washington are cool toward the New Deal, and the State itself contains a generous portion of Roosevelt critics.

Rising GOP Trend

But as of today the majority of Texas voters are apparently content to string along with the Democratic Party. Republicans can take some cheer, however, in the fact that the percentage of Texans favoring the Democratic Party is smaller today than it was at any time during the last three presidential elections.

The strength of the major parties in Texas today has been measured in a State-wide survey by the Institute. Interviewers talked to a cross-section of the voting population in nearly 30 different communities, including Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston, San Antonio, El Paso, Wichita Falls, Amarillo, Lubbock, San Saba, Big Spring, Kountze, Brownsville, Wharton, Liberty, Breckenridge and Jefferson. Each voter's present party preference for 1944 was recorded in the interviews.

78 Per Cent Democrats

On the basis of this survey, the party sentiment today is shown in the following table, which also gives the past vote of Texas in various presidential elections:

	Dem.	Rep.
Today	78%	22%
1940	81	19
1936	88	12
1932	89	11

Although it would still take a terrific swing to put Texas over into the Republican column, nevertheless there has been a steady decline of Democratic strength since President Roosevelt was first elected in 1932.

The high point of Republican strength in Texas was in 1928, when the Democratic candidate for President, Alfred E. Smith, polled only 48 per cent of the vote cast by the State, while Herbert Hoover received 52 per cent.

Union Backs NCHA Plan

The Washington Building and Construction Trades Council, AFL, yesterday disputed a statement by Rufus Lusk, president of the Taxpayers Association, that public housing costs "two or three times as much as private."

In a statement issued by Council Secretary John Locher, the labor group supported the housing program of the National Capital Housing Authority and charged that "all of our slums were built by private builders and are owned by private owners."

Furthermore, it was stated, "the new rental housing privately built is beyond the means of low income families."

Acknowledging that council members have worked on construction jobs for the NCHA, Locher declared that this fact alone had not influenced their position. The NCHA's homes are "practically the only rental houses built in recent years, whose rents are within the means of the men who built them," he said.

"Reclaiming our slums, providing decent homes for the lower income population is one of the biggest and most worthwhile jobs in construction. It cannot be done by private operators alone," he declared. "If it is turned over to them only, we shall have mass unemployment."

Blood Plasma Held Up by Truck Strike

Atlanta, Dec. 3 (AP).—Nineteen major trucking lines in the Atlanta area were hit by a walkout of local drivers and helpers today and it was learned that 22 local unions in the Southeast had voted to walk out.

Numerous Government shipments were tied up in the Atlanta area, including a big consignment of blood plasma for the armed forces.

A spokesman for the Atlanta lines said he believed the stoppage was in protest of a wage increase of 3 cents an hour recently granted by the War Labor Board or in protest of a dispute involving retroactive pay increases.

See Rise in Plate Cost

Cleveland, Dec. 3 (AP).—The Republic Steel Corp. today said "thousands of dollars will be added monthly to the cost of steel plate" because of a Maritime Commission order to ship the plates unsheared from the plant's Cleveland strip mill to shipyards.

The commission's order, Republic officials said, "is due to the slowdown on the plate-shearing line which has been in effect since October 9, and which followed a two-day illegal strike. This slowdown has resulted in a loss of ship plate amounting to approximately 20,000 tons of plate a month."

Cost of shipping unsheared material to the shipyards "will be increased by as much as $2.80 per ton in the case of that going to the Pacific Coast."

The higher costs were ascribed to increased freight on excess steel and to the difference in scrap price ceilings in shipbuilding centers compared with scrap prices in Cleveland.

Republic said recently the CIO United Steelworkers of America were responsible for the slowdown.

Labor to Fight Postwar Cuts, Green Says

Labor will demand shorter postwar hour standards without reductions in earnings, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, told the Senate Truman War Investigating Committee yesterday.

Asserting that the Administration has "not kept its part of the no-strike agreement by adjusting wages to absorb increasing living costs," Gren added:

"We shall endeavor to restore equity by insisting that peacetime hours standards shall be established without reductions in earnings."

Green indorsed Chairman Donald M. Nelson of the War Production Board as the man most fitted to guide the postwar reconversion program.

"Because of his valuable training and experience," Green said, "Mr. Nelson is especially well equipped for this job. I know of no man who has rendered a more valuable service during the war."

Green suggested that Nelson function under a "top policy council" in which Congress, management, labor and farmers would be represented.

Referring to labor's part in the war, Green said workers have had to depend on longer hours to meet increased living costs.

Commenting on the committee's recent report urging labor to be "realistic" about wage adjustments in the postwar period, Green said downward revision would not be economically advisable.

"If industry adopts such a plan on a Nation-wide scale it will be cutting off its own nose," he asserted.

President Asked Tax Lobby Probe

Washington attorney, shortly before the Senate took up the tax bill.

Jamieson has previously told The Post that he paid Comfort $30,000 for his services as an attorney in the case when his own attempts to enlist the interest of Senators in the proposed amendment failed.

Comfort, according to the SEC report, forwarded by the President to Biddle, first reported that he was unable to remember just what he had done with approximately $20,000 of the $30,000 fee.

Later, however, according to a supplementary SEC report, Comfort came to Washington voluntarily and informed the SEC that he had remembered that he had placed most of the money in a safe deposit box in a bank across from his office. The safe deposit box and its bundles of $50 and $100 bills figure at length in the supplementary report.

Reached at the Mayflower last night Comfort neither confirmed nor denied reports from a newsman that he had been observed leaving the grand jury room yesterday.

Herring who appeared before the grand jury along with Miss Melinda Alexander, former clerk of a Senate subcommittee of which he was chairman, has issued a public statement that he testified at his own request "to present the facts," concerning the part he played in presenting the amendment which eventually became law.

In statements published previous to his appearance here before the Grand Jury, Herring has declared that he introduced the amendment at the request of a friend and that the proposed amendment had been passed upon and approved by the Treasury Department before it was introduced.

Services of Jamieson were obtained, subcommittee testimony shows, by the New York firm of Olvaney, Eisner & Donnelly, headed by Judge George W. Olvaney, former Tammany Hall leader. Jamieson received $10,000 as his fee, and the New York firm received $8,750 for its part in the legal arrangements.

Manslaughter

Moulinie Is Convicted In Slaying

CARL MOULINIE

Georgetown, Del., Dec. 3 (AP).—Warrant Officer Carl Moulinie, 38, of the U. S. Army was convicted tonight of involuntary manslaughter in what the State charged was the "love triangle" killing of his fellow officer, Warrant Officer John H. Worthington, 33.

Under Delaware law, the conviction may carry a jail sentence of from 1 to 30 years.

An all-male jury had debated 3 hours and 55 minutes.

Moulinie heard the verdict without any visible reaction, then sat down as his counsel James M. Tunnell, jr., moved for a new trial, which delayed imposition of the sentence.

Moulinie was returned to jail pending argument on the motion, tentatively set for Monday.

Mrs. Elaine Brown Worthington, pretty 23-year-old widow of the dead officer, was in a room adjoining the packed courtroom when the verdict was returned. Mrs. Susan J. Gilboy of Washington, D. C., mother of Worthington, had remained in the courtroom while the jury debated, closely watching Moulinie, who paced about nervously.

He was permitted to talk to reporters and during the course of the converstation predicted "I'll get at least five years out of this."

Chief Justice Daniel J. Layton, sr., said in his charge to the jury that he felt the prosecution had offered "ample proof" that Moulinie had pointed the service pistol that killed his Fort Miles comrade, Warrant Officer John H. Worthington, 33, but added that "under certain circumstances the case might be found to be justifiable homicide."

Moulinie, testifying in his own defense, said today the pistol was in his hands when the fatal bullet was fired at Worthington's Rehoboth Beach home November 4, but said he drew the gun only because Worthington, a former Government employe in Washington, had threatened his wife, pretty Elaine Brown Worthington, 23, who's mother resides in Washington, saying he would "squeeze the life out of her with my hands." Moulinie said the statement was made shortly after a quarrel between the Worthingtons. The State charges Worthington quarreled with his wife after learning she had been intimate with Moulinie.

"Why did you take the gun out of your pocket?" Defense Counsel James M. Tunnell, jr., asked.

"I had seen that Mrs. Worthington had pretty good control over him with the gun in her hand," he replied, apparently referring to Mrs. Worthington's previous testimony that, on the night of the killing, she prevented Worthington from approaching her by threatening to shoot him in the legs.

"My purpose was to scare him," Moulinie testified. "I was gesticulating with the gun and it went off and was snatched out of my hand by the recoil.

"At that moment I didn't even know Johnny had been hit. . . . I heard Mrs. Worthington scream. . . . I ran after Mrs. Worthington. . . . Then I came back in the room, went to Johnny's body. I saw blood on the floor. I looked at him, and then for the first time realized he was beyond help."

Walker Assails Proposed Rise In Postal Rates

By Samuel W. Bell
Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Postmaster General Frank C. Walker told the Senate Finance Committee yesterday that it would be "highly regrettable" for Congress to approve the drastic increase in postal rates which was written into the $2,140,000,000 revenue bill by the House, in lieu of taxes, on the assumption that the postal increase would raise $166,800,000 in additional revenue.

Walker was preceded at the tax bill hearing by a group of State racing commissioners, including Herbert Bayard Swope of New York, whose testimony against the House's 5 per cent tax on parimutuel betting appeared to eliminate the proposal in so far as the forthcoming Senate version is concerned. A similar tax voted into the 1942 revenue bill by the House was killed by the Senate Finance Committee.

As a surprise witness Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, Democratic floor leader, produced Julian Van Winkle of Louisville, a distiller, who sought to convince the committee of the impossibility of solving the liquor shortage and at the same time netting the Government a sizable amount of revenue by the simple expedient of lowering from eight to four years the period in which liquor can be held under bond without payment of Federal tax.

The Postmaster General said his department did not want to make an estimate of the revenue likely to be derived from the postal rate increases voted by the House, but that it appeared certain that the increase in third-class mail would reduce rather than increase postal revenues.

Walker said he would be able to make recommendations on the subject to Congress within 60 days.

Testifying against the Federal tax of 5 per cent on pari-mutuel betting, Swope, who explained that he spoke also as personal representative of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, asked the committee:

"If the United States Government wants to go into partnership with horse racing, as the House bill would indicate, why isn't Congress realistic enough to turn to a national lottery, where you could collect billions?"

His statement was made after Gov. Spessard K. Holland of Florida had pointed out that racing entailed "very considerable management and policing on the part of the States." If the Federal Government levies this tax on top of the taxes exacted by the States on legalized betting, he pointed out, the Government would be getting a benefit without assuming any portion of the responsibility.

Laskey Ready To Hit Onion Black Market

John L. Laskey, chief attorney for the District Office of Price Administration, disclosed yesterday that he will file court actions today or Monday against what he termed a "widespread black marketing of onions here."

Laskey said he first plans to confer with the United States Attorney's officers here, but declined to state what specific action will be taken.

The OPA price panels here have been instructed, he said, to report all complaints of over-ceiling prices in onions to his office for possible prosecution, rather than sifting the cases themselves.

The action in court will be taken against retailers, Laskey asserted, because they have been reluctant in giving information against the retailers who have imposed higher prices on them.

"All the retailers are failing to cooperate by giving us information of violations at the wholesalers. These violations can be concealed by the wholesaler only if the retailers condone the evasive practices. We've pleaded for cooperation from the retailers to no avail. Our only alternative was to hold the retailers fully responsible," he said.

One large commission merchant of onions stated here recently that wholesalers were obtaining $7.50 per 50-pound bag of onions. The OPA ceiling varies on regular grade onions from $2.44 to $2.64 a bag.

Yule Shopping Volume Climbs 14% in D. C.

By S. Oliver Goodman

Christmas shopping continues to gain momentum in Washington with department store sales in the week ended November 27 showing a 14 per cent gain over the same week last year.

The Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond added that store sales in the entire Fifth District were 19 per cent higher in the week. For the four weeks ended November 27, retail sales in both Washington and the Fifth District averaged 14 per cent higher than in the corresponding period of 1942.

Retailers here and elsewhere continued to report that the acute manpower shortage is providing a handicap. Shelves of stores remained fairly well-stocked, although the latest statement of the Richmond Reserve Bank showed Washington stores' stocks of goods on October 31 were 10 per cent under those of the same time last year. A slightly better picture was presented in the entire Fifth Reserve District where stocks on hand at the end of October were only 4 per cent less than last year.

For the first 10 months this year, Washington department store sales showed a 6 per cent increase over the corresponding period of 1942, the Richmond Reserve Bank reported. Sales for the Fifth District in the same period were 12 per cent heavier.

Greyhound Net Soars

The Greyhound Corp. reported a net income of $8,546,144 for the nine months ended September 30, 1943, or $3.02 a common share. This compares with a net income of $6,811,585, equal to $2.39 a common share for the corresponding nine months last year.

Current Phenomenon Cited

Paul F. Cadman, economist of the American Bankers Association, asserted yesterday "an outstanding phenomenon of our present-day economic life is the fact that we are not forming capital, we are consuming it."

"The Treasury Division of Tax Research recently announced that at the end of this year American corporations will have earned 29 billion dollars in the four years from 1940-43, inclusive, over and above taxes," Cadman said in a speech prepared for the ABA conference on savings banking.

"We are actually led to believe that we are creating and saving wealth," he continued, "but . . . as long as our Government operates on a deficit basis and continues to borrow huge sums by the expansion of bank credit, it will not be possible to form capital."

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Dec. 3 (AP).—Wheat moved ahead today when a strong covering movement by previous short sellers found the market bare of offerings immediately prior to the close. The December contract, which had been lagging, spurted to a new seasonal peak, and its highest level since 1935, just before the final bell.

The late upward movement in wheat was reflected in other grains, rye substituting fractional gains for losses and oats reducing its earlier declines. Until the final minutes, trade was quiet with grain men awaiting news on subsidies, price ceilings and possible international developments.

At the close wheat was ⅝ to ¾ higher, December 1.66⅝; oats were ⅛ to ¼ lower, December 77¾; rye was ⅛ lower to ⅛ higher, December 1.15¼, and barley was unchanged to ⅛ higher, December 1.18¼. The board announced trading in December contracts will end Wednesday, December 22.

Green On Subsidies

Not only is the current debate over subsidies confused by a failure to define the issue clearly but it is further muddied by wild or calculatedly exaggerated predictions about the effect of subsidy bans on prices. President Green of the AFL declares that food prices will double in three months and treble in six months if subsidies are abandoned. On the other hand Paul S. Willis, president of the Grocery Manufacturers of America, estimates that food prices might advance as much as 5 per cent on some items if Congress rejects the subsidy program. He has the better of the argument. Since the subsidies now paid reduce retail prices of only a limited number of items by comparatively small amounts, Mr. Green's estimates are entirely fanciful.

Still the wild talk such as Mr. Green utters could create the very thing he contemplates. If the consuming public were to take the exaggerated predictions of Mr. Green and some other ardent subsidy advocates for gospel truth, the consequences might be serious in case subsidies are dropped. Alarmed consumers might then begin buying runs on unrationed foods, indulge in liberal patronage of black markets for rationed articles, and thus bring about the overthrow of price controls because of fear that prices were going to crack.

Already we have laid the foundation for a terrifying rise in prices if people were to cut loose and spend the vast sums now in circulation. They have not done that, and they are not likely to do it so long as they have confidence that unspent dollars will not lose their value overnight because of uncontrollable inflation. Irresponsible chatter about the doubling and trebling of prices as a result of dropping subsidies plays upon the emotion of fear, out of which buying panics and uncontrollable inflation develop. If panic buying were to start, the wage increases that Mr. Green's unions would then demand could never keep up with the rise in living costs. The AFL head ought to bear this in mind before he tries to make our flesh creep and our pockets disgorge with his panic-mongering.

Relaxing A Ban

On November 7 The Post published a letter from a correspondent urging release of industrial statistics on production, consumption, and stocks on hand of various commodities as a means of insuring sound and efficient planning for the future. The letter further pointed out that with production at a record level and continuing to rise it was no longer necessary to follow a policy of secrecy. Chairman Nelson of the WPB evidently agrees with our correspondent. He has decided to relax the ban on publication of industrial statistics, past and current, hitherto available for use by war agencies only.

Mr. Nelson warns that this change of policy does not imply that the war is as good as won and that war efforts can be relaxed. It does, however, testify eloquently both to a serene confidence in the outcome and to a conviction that the battle of production is won. The record fully justifies such optimism. For instance, during the two years that have elapsed since Pearl Harbor, total industrial production, as measured by the Federal Reserve index, has increased more than 40 per cent and the index now stands nearly 150 per cent above the level of 1935-39. That stupendous production achievement has enabled us to devote about 70 per cent of current output to war production without any drastic curtailment of civilian output. In fact, despite specific shortages of certain kinds of goods, civilians have been faring extremely well on the whole.

While we dare not relax our efforts to maintain war production at whatever level is considered necessary by our planning agencies, it would be folly not to be prepared for termination of the European war at any time. The only kind of systematic preparation that industry can make now for the postwar period lies in the planning field. And as The Post's correspondent so well stated, "to plan intelligently requires trustworthy statistical information. Unreliable data mean catch-as-catch-can planning, added costs, production loss and a shameful waste of manpower." A manufacturer who does not even know the total output of his own industry and has no idea as to the size of inventories, total consumption, etc., in his particular industry is utterly at sea. He cannot possibly chart a course for the postwar period without pertinent industrial facts to guide his decisions.

The ending of the war in Europe will not bring to a close the war in the Pacific. It will, however, result in sharp reductions in output of certain kinds of munitions and change the character of our war production. For a good many companies the problem of reconversion may, therefore, be just around the corner, and prudent managements should be considering what to do when peace comes. Some companies could shift with little delay from production of war materials to production for civilian use. Others would require a good many months to effect such conversion. In all cases capital outlays are required to effect the transition. Business men consequently are greatly in need of basic industrial information on which to base their decisions as to what to produce and how much to produce in the postwar period. Given access to statistical data accumulated for the purpose of guiding the war effort, they will be in much better position to forecast the character and extent of civilian demands. And, of especially great importance, advance preparation will enable them to put their plans into effect without delay when peace comes.

Pensions On The Hill

The increasing interest in congressional committee chairmanships is a good sign. It suggests that the eyes of the people are on Congress. And well they may be, for the present committee system is functioning poorly. The people are eager for changes—any changes that offer hope of improvement. In fact, sentiment is beginning to develop around some reforms which might prove to be very disappointing in actual practice. That is one reason why we hope that Congress itself will set up a joint committee to study its organization and procedure with the object of modernizing the whole system on a practical basis.

Much of the present criticism is directed at the seniority rule governing the election of committee chairmen in both the House and Senate. That means control of Congress by old men. In many instances the legislator brought to the top by the seniority rule is not capable of handling the arduous duties of a committee chairman. Occasionally he is the least able member, or he may be wholly at odds with the general line of policy favored by a majority of the members. Legislative decisions are thus often left to chance, for the chairman of a committee is a very powerful factor in the law-making process.

Congressman Cannon, for example, became chairman of the House Appropriations Committee in preference to Congressman Woodrum only because his name begins with a "C." Both men went on the committee at the same time. But apparently "Cannon" was written into the books before "Woodrum" out of alphabetical considerations. So he got the job in spite of Mr. Woodrum's special qualifications for that assignment. This blind operation of chance is scarcely compatible with the needs of twentieth century democracy.

The only difficulty is that no one has invented a satisfactory substitute for the seniority rule. The most popular suggestion is that committee chairmen be elected. But that would give rise to log-rolling, personal politics within the committee, and bitter personal feuds that might be worse than the seniority rule. Chairmanships might easily go to the man who could pull the most political wires. Certainly election of committee chairman would not be an ideal solution.

Some members of Congress have suggested retirement of committee chairmen at 70 years of age. That rule, also, might work very poorly in practice. Age is no measure of either vigor or talent. An inflexible retirement rule would unquestionably work injustices in some cases and much dissatisfaction in others. There are, however, two means of improving the caliber of committee chairmen that would probably be less questionable in their results. One of these is more careful selection of members for the major committees. That would automatically shut out incompetents from major chairmanships. Reduction of the number of committees would also help. The second method would be to grant Congressmen retirement benefits.

Congress was induced to repeal its so-called Pensions-for-Congressmen Act some months ago because of its poor timing and because the public did not understand its usefulness. We are convinced, however, that an appropriate contributory retirement system for members of Congress would encourage the removal of some of its dead wood. Aged committee chairmen would certainly be more eager to relinquish their powers into younger hands and step into the role of retired elder statesmen if long periods of service were rewarded by retirement benefits. Of course, a retirement plan would stop a long way short of a solution of the problem created by the seniority rule. But we believe that it would be a useful and promising beginning.

Mr. Bracken's Ills

Brendan Bracken, the British Minister of Information, was a good deal less self-confident than is his wont when he rose in the House of Commons on Thursday to answer criticisms of the way the news of the Cairo conference was handled. No wonder! Mr. Bracken was under sharp attack from three directions. In the first place, the British press and public are annoyed because the news of the conference was withheld from them long after it was known to the rest of the world, including enemy countries. Secondly, Elmer Davis, the head of the Office of War Information, had sent to Mr. Bracken an angry note protesting the breaking by Reuter's of news "which had been given to American editors with the strictest admonitions that utter secrecy be preserved." The cheap beat scored by Reuter's, by destroying the element of surprise, was helpful only to the enemy. Thirdly, the correspondents at Cairo, British and American, were angered by the cavalier treatment they received. One British correspondent went so far as to write that "when the full story is published the name of the British Ministry of Information is going to stink from one end of the United States to the other."

With such a varied assortment of barbs in his hide it is not surprising that Mr. Bracken's normal ebullience ebbed away. All he could say was that "something must be done about these conferences. In my opinion, they must be absolutely security conferences in the future." Presumably that means that during the conferences censorship should black out the meetings, the personalities involved, and the venue. As between the multiplicity of leaks and complete silence, the latter, for security reasons, is certainly to be preferred. But since it is questionable whether any such absolute silence is possible, a better way of handling the news side of the conference would be through a workable agreement by Great Britain and the United States. What we have been getting is the worst of two worlds—silence that is all too vocal, news that is far too closely regulated. It is pretty late in the day. But a new deal is very much in order.

Lottery Bill

A French Finance Minister once said that the art of taxation is to pluck the goose without making it squawk. Members of Congress are fearful that the enactment of a real tax measure would make the American taxpayer squawk so loud and shrill as to imperil 1944 election chances. Accordingly they seem to be content with the apology for a wartime tax measure which the House already has approved. However, they are conscious that the bill is grossly inadequate, and some of them are pondering "painless methods" of collecting more revenue. One of the suggestions, which has already been raised to the stature of a bill, is a Government lottery aimed at raising five billion dollars. The bill, it is reported, will get hearings immediately after senatorial disposal of the tax bill. Senator Guffey, who is the sponsor, says that already he has obtained a wide measure of support for this means of siphoning away some of the surplus money which the tax bill will still leave in American pockets.

It is to be hoped Senator Guffey is wrong. To turn to a lottery immediately after the disposal of a tax bill would be to confess the fiscal inadequacy of Congress. Confession in this respect would be worse than realization. It is as if Congress were to say to the American people: "We know the tax bill is five billion dollars short, but we are afraid of taxing it away." Nothing could be worse in a potential state of inflation than such an advertisement of the fiscal fears of government. When the people find their representatives afraid of doing their plain duty, their confidence in government is shaken, and a weak government means a weak dollar. In other words, the people take it out on the dollar by abnormal spending. They do so because the values of tomorrow are jeopardized by a government which is uncertain about its fiscal course.

This danger would be compounded by the social consequences of a lottery. Everybody is to some extent a gambler, but government-sponsored gambling would make the United States a Nation of gamblers, and preoccupied gamblers at that. Nothing but harm would result. It is evident already that, as a result of a combination of war, big money, and unsettlement, a hectic flush has come over our society. If the legislators were to go to New York, they would see a city on a spending spree. Since a gambler is notoriously a free spender, that spree would be intensified by a lottery. So that, instead of being a means of checking spending, it would act, on the contrary, as a spur to the spending splurge upon which so many people have embarked. A lottery, moreover, would discourage production as well as encourage spending by taking people's minds off their tasks. We can ill afford any such diversion at a time when all our energies should be devoted to our war-winning work.

This doesn't mean that we cannot canalize fruitfully the urge to which Senator Guffey would appeal. Since the idea of compulsory savings seems to have no chance of adoption, why should there not be a drawing feature in the next bond issue? The bonds could be offered at less than the going rate, with the difference distributed every quarter day as prizes to those who hold the drawn numbers. Drawings have been a feature in wartime bond issues of several governments, notably France's. They do not encourage extravagance. On the contrary, French thrift is sometimes said to be due to the drawing feature in bonds. We feel that if this feature were adopted, the sale of bonds would be increased and sustained.

LULLABY TO A GRANDMOTHER

Sleep, my lady,
Lady, sleep!
Wings of lightness carry your feet
Down feathery pikes of memory

Skip once more by the trumpet vines
Where the redbird swings and the ivy twines,
Sleep, my dear one, sleep!

Send John Joe for your Morgan mare,
Gallop away with the wind in your hair,
Sleep, my sweet one, sleep!

Sally forth at the Frenchman's Ball,
Circle and circle and circle the Hall,
Sleep, my tired one, sleep!

Sing in the belled sleigh heading for home
With the stars like flame and the road like foam,
Sleep, beloved, sleep!

Sleep, my lady,
Little white rose,
Follow the pathway
Memory goes.

Good Neighbors

By Virginia Prewett

Butler Report

ITEM BY ITEM, the Butler report attacking the Good Neighbor policy and our Latin-American neighbors must certainly be the most fantastic compilation that ever became a Senate document.

Wraps went on this report after a favored few reporters got a glimpse of it last week, and it has been a Capitol mystery while at the printers. Penciled additions to the typescript I saw Thursday in a Senate office reveal that patching has been going on in the meantime.

This document is unbelievably erroneous, contradictory and ill-intentioned. Over-all charges that the United States Government has spiurged away not six billion but $8,054,066,470 of American taxpayers' money in Latin American can be taken apart piece by piece. But more amazing still, this report:

(1) Pillories as the "Bolivian blunder" the transaction through which Bolivia, after squeezing Germans out of control of her airlines, turned them over to Pan American-Grace Airways, a United States line, to operate.

(2) Highlights for crucifixion the transaction through which Mexico, after stopping exports of 26 vital war materials to Germany, Italy and Japan in July, 1941, gave us he exclusive right to buy these materials.

(3) Condemns as WPA, NYA and FSA" these activities: Food growing in Costa Rica for American armed forces in the Canal Zone. Food growing and health cleanups around bases where American soldiers and sailors are stationed in Brazil. The United Fruit Co. contract to raise manila hemp in Central America for our war foctories. We lost our source of this material for naval ropes when Japan took the Philippines.

(4) Condemns as Government splurging loans that finance the sale of United States machinery, goods and services to Latin America. These loans are necessary because American business does not grant long credit terms in this field. Loans are current and pay interest.

(5) Assails cultural relations activities whenever and wherever found, yet states that "just the increased cultural and literary contact of the last few years alone has already had a profound effect on Latin-American thinking."

(6) Includes in the blanket indictment for useless spending in Latin America sums that went for administrative expenses and operations of major agencies in the United States and all foreign countries.

(7) Questions the value of the Inter-American Highway and makes the untrue claim that we have contributed 438 million dollars to the Pan-American Highway System. We have contributed less than 26 million dollars, the bulk for a military road to the Panama Canal. Export-Import Bank loans for all highway construction in Latin America add to 85 million dollars. Only 35 million dollars have been drawn out.

(8) Makes fantastic accusations against Latin Americans, such as the repeated charge that Paraguay is preparing war against Argentina. Paraguay has a scant million people. Argentina has 13 millions, controls the waterway that is Paraguay's road to the outside world and dominates Paraguay economically.

(9) Pads expenditures outrageously. This includes counting into the cost of the Good Neighbor policy money spent to recruit Mexican workers brought to this country to work, payrolls for our forces guarding Latin-American bases and strategic materials bought to keep our war factories turning. Also includes such bare-faced effrontery as counting in the indictment 47 million dollars in aid to our island possession, Puerto Rico, and over 298 million dollars spent on construction, maintenance, operation and sanitation of the Panama Canal!

(10) Tosses in a 150-million-dollar guess item called "miscellaneous." Tosses in a billion-dollar estimate at the last minute on the strength of "a telephone conversation with Jesse Jones by Hugh Butler, November 24, 1943, 2:50 p. m."

(11) As final confusion, calls for a cooperative program costing more money a year than the Rockefeller office has had to spend on its activities. The report calls for 50 million a year. The CIAA has had a total of 129 million dollars from 1940 to June 30, 1944.

All this will give an idea of what the document is like.

The Butler charges against the Good Neighbor program are made under the general accusation that it has been kept from the American people. This is not true. Since April, 1941, The Washington Post has published on its editorial page every Saturday a column by this writer, giving full details of every program and every phase of our relations with Latin America, from the Honduran road on through. The political attack on the grounds of cost was forecast here on November 13.

In following articles, major and minor charges in this attack will be examined in detail.

Cycle Of Cathay

By Barnet Nover

Japan, China And The Cairo Pact

ALTHOUGH the Declaration of Cairo has won unstinted praise in most Allied quarters, critical voices have been raised to denounce it as a tactically unwise move.

It is being pointed out, for instance, that at a time when the most advanced of our forces in the Pacific and east Asia are still thousands of miles from Tokyo, we have placed the Japanese under notice that defeat will mean the loss of every bit of territory they have acquired during the past half century.

It is argued, therefore, that the publication of the Cairo war aims concerning Japan will make our military task in the Pacific harder by increasing the fanatical determination of the Japanese militarists to hold on to what they have, regardless of cost.

SUCH A CONTENTION does, indeed, have a surface validity. But it ignores the basic fact that we can no more compromise with the Japanese than we can compromise with Hitler. For us as for our enemies it is all or nothing. They know it even better than we do.

Pearl Harbor was no move of uncalculated recklessness, the picture of a nation running amok. It was only a further stage in the working out of an elaborate plan conceived many years ago and carried out, step by step, over the years.

When, at the end of 1941, Tojo and his co-conspirators took on the United States, Great Britain, the Netherlands, Australia and New Zealand all at once, they were convinced that the situation in the Pacific would never again be as favorable as it was then.

That was the moment that Hideyoshi had dreamed of back in the fifteenth century and that Yoshida Shoin had envisioned in the days when Japan was still living in the enforced isolation of the Shogunate period.

THE JAPANESE leaders were convinced that their dream of domination of all of Eastern Asia and the South Pacific would come true. But they have also been aware from the start that failure this time would set back the clock not to the pre-Pearl Harbor period but half a century and more.

It is not merely the desire to punish Japan, although she deserves the severest possible punishment for her crimes, that led the Cairo powers to pledge themselves to destroy the Japanese empire root and branch.

That pledge was even more the product of the determination never again to permit Japan to menace the peace of the world. To do that the first necessity is to destroy every foothold Japan has on the continent of Asia, every vantage point in the China Sea.

IF JAPAN is to be kept down it must be done through the united efforts of her neighbors, which means, in particular, China, the United States, Russia and the British Commonwealth. And the key to this combination is China.

It was China's weakness during the centuries in which the West was moving into Asia that provided Japan with the opportunity she was quick to capitalize.

She began her outward expansion in the 1870's with the seizure of the Loochoo Islands. In 1895, as a result of her easy victory over China, she acquired a toe hold on the Asiatic mainland and the island of Formosa. Then years later, through the defeat of Russia, Japan was able to extend the area of her control over the mainland and in 1910 she annexed Korea.

Japan was partially thwarted in her attempt, beginning in 1915 with the Twenty-One Demands, to establish her domination over China. But her setback at the Washington conference involved only a delay in execution, not an abandonment of her plans. The fires of Japanese imperialism were relit in 1931.

For a time Japan's aggressions against China ran parallel to the aggressions carried out by the other powers. That enabled the Japanese to play one power against another. But the basic fact throughout was China's weakness.

AT CAIRO, as previously at Moscow, the great Allied powers accepted China as an equal partner.

In view of China's present weakness the two declarations constitute an act of faith as well as a gesture of friendship. But the faith in China manifested at Moscow and Cairo is fully justified by China's conduct during the past year, by the quality of her leadership which the Cairo pact will greatly strengthen, and by the promise of her future.

A cycle is ending in the Far East. Between promise and fulfillment a long and bloody struggle intervenes. But the goal has been plainly indicated—for all to see.

Butler's Assertions

As a subscriber to The Post for many years, we resent your editorial in today's issue on Senator Butler's expose of the graft in progress throughout South America, and other Latin countries.

We are Democrats but we repudiate the New Deal and most of its activities. We set apart every cent we could spare for War Bonds because of our deep interest and sympathy as well as admiration for our fighting men, bless them! But for some months we have had good reason to doubt that much of our sacrifices in money went for our soldiers and others. And now we have no more for War Bonds. I have had to sacrifice some small properties, which were rented, because of the vicious Rent Law which forbids my having control of my properties, and while I paid for maintenance, I had no say or ability to manage it, if the tenants thought otherwise. So I sold them. The interest I now obtain from investments is small, but while I lose, so does the Government. As it should be.

I am ashamed of your attitude, and consider your paper very unfair in its judgment.

MRS. E. B. NEWMAN.
Hyattsville, Md., Nov. 30.

May I compliment you on your editorial "Ill-Will Ambassador," in your issue of the 28th, regarding Senator Butler's recent report to the Senate on his Latin-American tour.

You have very correctly stated that the hatred Senator Butler alleges Latin Americans have toward the United States is the heritage of a century of Yankee imperialism, successfully overcome by our neighborliness and assistance to the countries alluded to in developing their lands and resources.

In our endeavors to cultivate Latin-American good will, the diplomacy displayed by our illustrious Secretary of State, and his understanding of the Latin-American viewpoint in international affairs, have been sincerely appreciated by Latin Americans who were captivated by Mr. Hull's personality from the time they first met him in Montevideo, in 1934, and at subsequent Pan-American conferences. Mr. Hull's art in conducting negotiations, his action, as well as his excellent tact, candor and discretion, have created a state of friendliness and cordiality unprecedented in the history of inter-American relations.

For more than 15 years, until recently, I have been traveling extensively in Latin America where I have valuable contacts socially, commercially and in government circles. I cannot recall a single instance when the name of Cordell Hull was not venerated by all classes in Latin America, nor when the peoples of those countries did not refer to the United States as the most generous, altruistic and humanitarian nation in the world. These positive facts certainly do not corroborate Senator Butler's assertions of Latin-American hatred toward the United States.

The countries of Latin America are important coming markets. With immense natural resources, populations growing by leaps and bounds, living standards steadily mounting to high levels, they possess a potential purchasing power which, in a decade or two, will constitute important world economic factors.

Unfortunately we still have Americans who fail to realize the importance of Latin-American good-will, and the desirability of our cooperating financially in the development of our southern neighbors, and other countries, as the British have done for many years with incalculable benefit to themselves. However, if Senator Butler's knowledge of Latin America and the attitude of their peoples toward the United States is to be measured by his distortion of the figures regarding the amounts our Government has spent in Latin America, his recent report to the Senate is not likely to go very far. Let us hope so.

False Signatures

In the past, and perhaps in the present time, dependents of servicemen, persons drawing Government pensions and others who receive money in the form of checks through the United States mail, are sometimes inconvenienced and embarrassed owing to the fact that their checks fall into the hands of unauthorized persons who rob mail boxes and knowingly and willingly forge signatures and cash checks at various places of business.

To help eliminate this practice and to save time and money investigating such cases, it is respectfully suggested that a space about the size of a postage stamp be reserved on all Government checks for the right index fingerprint of the original payee. In any case where the right index finger is missing another finger should be utilized and the name of the finger used should be entered in writing on the check near the fingerprint, such as "third finger, left hand."

The only equipment necessary for this system to be properly carried out at banks, grocery stores, etc. would be a small stamp pad and a bottle of stamping ink.

Our Great Danger

The Congress of the United States will be held responsible for the coming inflation.

What we need is a stronger OPA, higher taxes, and a more thorough support of our administration's attempt to prevent the worst evil to a large group of citizens, inflation.

Syria And Lebanon

By Paul Winkler

Racial Crazy Quilt

IN CONNECTING the agitation for Lebanese independence with the attempt to set up an Arab federation, and putting forward the claims of its proponents as part of a "justice for the Arabs" campaign, some well-meaning commentators have neglected a fact which was perhaps unknown to them. That is that the largest group in Lebanon is not Moslem, but Christian.

The great majority of the Lebanese are Maronites—that is, adherents to the local branch of the Christian Church, which, since the eighteenth century, has recognized the supremacy of the Pope, although the Maronites have retained in their rituals and ceremonies many of their local observances.

Living together with the Christian Maronites are a minority of Moslems and at least 45,000 Druses. It is not possible to be more precise about the number of the Druses, for they are a secret sect, and their secrecy extends often even to concealing their membership in this group. Their leaders permit them to observe the religious rites of other groups with whom they may live, and they have thus infiltrated their congregations. There are Maronites who receive Communion regularly and Moslems who make the prescribed prayers of Islam who are actually, in secret, faithful only to the Druses.

Druses' Religion

The religion of the Druses is only distantly related to Mohammedanism. One of its chief differences from the Moslem faith is that it rejects the doctrine of fatalism, believing in free will.

One of the seven commandments of the Druses enjoins them to tell the truth always—but only to one another. To deceive a non-Druse is perfectly justifiable and even praiseworthy.

The Druses are ruled by those who have been fully initiated into the secrets of the religion, which means about 15 per cent of their number.

The Maronites in Syria have always been the stanchest defenders of retaining France's influence there, because they are in the minority, and they fear that if France withdraws they will be submerged in the Moslem flood. In Lebanon the situation is reversed. There the Maronites are the loudest in demanding independence, because they are in the majority. But even they do not want independence at the price of being included in an Arab federation, which would automatically transform their status from a majority to a minority position.

The Druses were strongly pro-French until well after World War I and supported the allotting of the mandate over Syria to France. It was in 1925 that a liberal but hot-headed French high commissioner, General Sarrail, lost the favor of the Druses for France by the high-handed fashion in which he intervened in a local difference between the Druses and certain officials of the French administration.

Henri de Jouvenel was named to replace General Sarrail in 1926, but it was too late. The damage had been done. The Mandate Commission of the League stigmatized Sarrail for his personal errors, but recognized the difficulties created for France by the nature of the region's population, and the sincerity of France's attempt to give the territories a good government. Although there was no war on at that time, to make the granting of independence less practicable, certainly nobody then would have ventured to suggest that the French Levant was ready for the application of the principle of "self-determination."

Henri Ponsot

When Henri Ponsot became high commissioner of Lebanon he expressed France's desire as that of educating the Lebanese gradually to the point where they would be able to take over their own government. But it could not be expected that a few years of education would wipe out centuries of the habit of wars, riots and reciprocal repression.

Even in the nineteenth century the history of Lebanon was a long recital of intrigue and murder. The Turks were not interested in educating their subjects, whom they ruled with an iron hand. The Maronites rebelled once and the Druses twice against the Turks; the Druses and the Moslems both rose several times against the Maronites. Bloody massacres were frequent, of which one of the worst occurred in 1860, when foreign consulates were sacked and 2500 Christians killed. After that the French army occupied Lebanon for a year until order had been restored, and then withdrew, returning the territory to the Turks, who had learned enough from the experience to grant more rights to the Maronites in the territory where they held the majority.

The men in power in Syria and Lebanon today do not appear to have been able to handle the situation any more skillfully than some of their predecessors, and General Catroux, like Henri de Jouvenel, seems to have been faced with the task of trying to repair a situation which others had allowed to get out of control.

The Case For The Subsidies

THOUGH I HAVE been arguing in these columns that the power to employ food subsidies should for the present be retained, I believe that the burden of proof is always on those who favor the use of subsidies. Normally and in general they are undesirable in that they compel economic enterprise to support uneconomic. To justify any subsidy the proponent must always show a clear, overriding public reason for departing from the basic principle of our economy which is that goods should be bought and sold at the prices which are set in a free and honest market.

LIPPMANN

THERE ARE obvious examples, which everyone would recognize, where subsidies are acceptable because the public reason is so overriding. The national defense is wholly subsidized. To a very large degree public education is subsidized. To a very considerable extent the promotion of public health is subsidized. So are parks, playgrounds, and many kinds of public recreation. So are churches, scientific research facilities, public libraries, art galleries, and symphony orchestras subsidized, whether directly out of the public treasury or indirectly by private contributions which are exempted from taxation. The reason for subsidizing such activities is that, though they are necessary or highly desirable, they could not be maintained by ordinary commercial transactions.

The case is not so clear once we come to enterprises which are ordinarily run for profit. Is it, for example, justifiable to use subsidies to protect and maintain domestic agriculture, to assist the merchant marine and civilian air transport? Some would say no: let the law of supply and demand operate without interference. Others of us would say yes: the preservation of American agriculture and of the rural community life which goes with it is an overriding national interest, not only to insure the Nation's food supply in time of war, but also permanently to prevent our people from becoming wholly urban and industrialized. We would say also that living upon our continental island we must, even if it requires subsidies, possess means of sea and air transportation to other continents adequate to insure our economic independence.

THE USE OF subsidies to stabilize food prices in wartime must be justified, if at all, on such broad ground of public interest. It may be, of course, that a particular subsidy is wrongly designed, is unnecessary, or is badly administered. If so, it should be reexamined. But the large question is whether subsidies are necessary in order to stabilize prices in wartime, and whether the stabilization of wartime prices is so desirable that the expenditure is justified.

That subsidies are necessary, and that they can be effective has, I believe, been abundantly demonstrated by the experience of Great Britain, Canada, the United States, and indeed of every country which has stabilized prices. Of the 14 products which are recognized in the British food index, 11 products representing 90 per cent in weight, are subsidized. Prices in the United Kingdom have remained remarkably stable; no one, I think, would argue that this could have been done if Parliament had outlawed food subsidies. Our own experience in the past few months since subsidies have been used is by no means unimpressive. The fact of the matter is that we have had a substantial success.

THE QUESTION then is whether stabilizing the cost of essential foods is worth the money and the bother of subsidies and of the whole machinery, inevitably complicated and no doubt too complicated, of price control. If, as is the case, the alternative is to set in motion a spiral of general wage and general price increases, can anyone doubt that the subsidies and the bother of price control are the lesser of the two evils?

Surely it is worth a lot of money and a lot of bother to the Nation not to have to take our minds off the war in order to deal with countless wage disputes, to deal with the grievances of Government employes, pensioners, small business men, who would be caught in the spiral of rising prices, to face, as we should have to, a continual recalculation of costs on war contracts and of estimated Government expenditures. Let no one forget that the Government itself is planning to spend about two-thirds of the national income, and that wages are roughly one-half the national income. To unstabilize the wage structure generally would unsettle profoundly the whole calculation on which the war effort is based. It is already hard enough to have to deal with the unsettlement due to special pressures here and there.

THERE ARE many, I realize, who are troubled by the idea that money spent on subsidies helps to control the effects of the inflation which results from enormous Government expenditures. They are forgetting that we are in the abnormal situation where the Government itself is a principal consumer.

If we were not in this abnormal situation, then obviously a Government subsidy to hold prices would be inflationary in that it increased the popular purchasing power by the amount of the subsidy. The critics would then be quite right. But in our present situation the Government itself is not only a great consumer but it has an unlimited supply of purchasing power. Therefore, the more the Government has to pay for what is buys, the more inflationary money it will issue to get what it needs; the less it has to pay, because prices are kept down, the less inflationary money it has to put into circulation.

For this special reason and in these special circumstances, subsidies which prevent a general rise of prices are, if correctly administered, contrainflationary. The cost of the subsidies is more than washed out by the much greater saving which comes from the Government's not having to pay higher prices for goods and for labor.

WE ALL ASK ourselves, naturally, whether these so-called consumer subsidies, once established, can ever be discontinued. My view is that of all types of subsidy, they would be the easiest to discontinue when the war is over. The reason is that when civilian production is fully under way again, the volume of it will be so great that we shall have a buyer's and not, as we have today, a seller's market. In a buyer's market we shall have no pressure to protect the consumer because prices will be falling. The pressure will come from the other direction, from the producers.

That is a bridge we can cross when we come to it.

How President Aided FCC

By International News Service

The House committee investigating the FCC heard yesterday that President Roosevelt last September 7 rejected a joint Army-Navy request for transfer of radio intelligence activities of the commission to the War and Navy Departments.

Mr. Roosevelt emphasized, in a letter made public before the committee, that the Board of War Communications, headed by FCC Chairman James Fly, is "the responsible interdepartmental body charged with reponsibility in the field of wartime communications."

The President advised that "any differences" should be reviewed by the War Communications Board.

Mr. Roosevelt's letter was addressed to Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson and Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox.

Stimson and Knox had proposed an executive order transferring radio intelligence functions from the hands of the FCC on the grounds that duplication by the FCC has "endangered the effectiveness and security of military radio intelligence."

The Chief Executive declared that "after careful study by the staff of the executive offices" and "full consideration" he determined that the transfer should not be made.

Mr. Roosevelt's letter was a forthright indorsement of Fly, whose activities have been assailed by counsel for the House committee and its majority membership.

GOP Denies Flynn Charge

By the Associated Press

The charge from Edward J. Flynn, former Democratic chairman, that Republicans have broken a wartime "political truce" brought a denial from Republican leaders yesterday that there was such an agreement and this comment from GOP Chairman Harrison Spangler:

"It is no wonder he is now calling for a truce. That is just another way of asking the people to stop kicking the New Deal around."

Spangler added in a statement that Flynn wants "the Republicans to step aside" and let the "palace guard pursue this campaign for a fourth term unmolested."

Referred to Defense

"Next, no doubt, he will want to call the election off entirely."

Flynn, Bronx (N. Y.) Democratic leader, said in an interview with the Miami Daily News at Miami Beach, Fla., that "After Pearl Harbor when I was national chairman of the Democratic Party and Joe Martin was chairman of the Republican Party we both agreed there would be a truce in politics for the duration of the war." He declared the Democrats had lived up to it but that the Republicans had not.

AN OPEN LETTER

To the Editor
Washington Post,

Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:

About two weeks ago the Congress of the United States confirmed Hon. Manuel L. Quezon, President of the Philippine Commonwealth Government in exile in this country, that he will continue as President of the Philippines for an indefinite period of time or for the duration of global war until the Philippine Islands shall be freed from Japan's sovereignty. Further that confirmation or ratification by the Congress has automatically clarified the political status of Filipinos throughout the United States as Filipino-Americans under the protection of this country, and more or less it could be said the Filipino people as a whole are entirely grateful to beloved Uncle Sam. Nevertheless President Quezon's cabinet is still incomplete due to the fact he (the President) has not appointed an attorney general nor solicitor general to constitute a legal department or department of justice.

In the study of political science, I never yet have seen a government without an attorney general. For this reason, Mr. Editor and readers, your voice might help to fill the present vacancies mentioned above from legal-minded Filipinos, such as Vicente Villamin, A. A. Ylagan, Sebastian Ugarte, Manuel I. Abella, etc. The other day I visited President Quezon in his residence here in the city and I saw him sick in bed; hence I wish God will help him to get well as soon as possible in order that he may complete the members of his cabinet, which is somewhere in the missing link of the United States. By the way, I like to state that President Quezon and all the members of his family are very lovely people and I speak of the truth, because I am a great believer in the statement of St. Agustin when he said, "VERUM EST ID QUOD EST," meaning that the truth is the thing itself.

Very sincerely yours,

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

New York, Dec. 3.—There will be no attempt made to try the case in this column (that would not be fair), but personally we do not like the chances of William D. Cox tomorrow when he goes before Judge Landis in a rehearing on his banishment from baseball.

POVICH

The newest episode of the Philadelphia Story takes you through bizarre turns to say the least. It was supposedly deader than, well, a mackerel when the big league meeting opened this week. Cox was out. Landis has given him the heave-ho on November 23 after Cox admitted that, as president of the Phillies, he had bet on games. Today, Landis came out of a routine meeting of the big leagues and was in casual conversation with baseball writers when he suddenly announced:

"Oh, by the way, the Cox case is in again. I'm holding a new hearing tomorrow." The judge watched the startled reaction of the correspondents with undisguised pleasure. He delights in such little treats.

How come the case was reopened? What was new? What gives, anyway? Just as startling and every bit as puzzling as the reopening of the matter was the basis of Cox's new attempt to clear his skirts. "Mr. Cox admitted to Landis that he had bet on games, merely as a means of testing the loyalty of one of his associates. He told Mr. Landis a story when he said he had bet," declared Lloyd Stryker, Cox's counsel.

If that is true, the amazing Mr. Cox had hit upon a novel way of testing the loyalty of one of his associates—by confessing to Judge Landis that he had been betting on ball games. That was equivalent to sticking his head in the lion's mouth. To test the loyalty of an associate, Cox told Landis a story that was certain to get himself kicked out of baseball. Jeez!

Now Cox hopes to clear his skirts by making an honest admission that he lied to Landis on November 3 when he confessed he had made 15 to 20 bets of from $25 to $100 on games involving the Phillies; and that he lied to a radio audience of probably millions when he said on November 23 that "I made some small and sentimental bets before I learned of the rule against this." As we were saying, we do not like Cox's chances, although Landis has stated that if Cox convinces him tomorrow that he lied in his confession that he had bet, "I will issue a public statement."

Of course, Mr. Cox can be a very convincing fellow on occasion. Certainly he convinced Landis last month that he had bet on ball games even if, as he says now, it was only a medium for "testing the loyalty of one of my associates." Anyhow, Landis took his word for it and kicked him out of the game.

Now, Cox says, that was all a lie. He didn't bet any money on the Phillies. . . Just a hat, or a couple of packs of cigarettes. His confession was just a device to learn if a suspected employe who would hear of Landis' investigation would blow the whistle on him. Tomorrow he is going to ask the judge to believe him.

Landis, however, can be a tough guy. We learn now that one of Cox's friends telephoned Landis the day before Cox's banishment and told him there were new facts in the case and to withhold action. But apparently Landis had heard enough. He kicked Cox out without accepting any more testimony.

It is also revealed that Landis refused to withhold any longer the statement banishing Cox because on the following day the Phillies' directors were meeting to elect a new president, and Landis felt he would be placed in the position of "covering up" Cox until after the election. Baseball men long since have known that the judge "covers up" nobody at any time.

Cox must have been a naive fellow if he thought he could simply sell his stock in the Phillies and retire from baseball quietly after admitting to Landis that he had bet on games. When he refused to attend a hearing called by Landis on November 22 "because it would serve no useful purpose," Landis let him have it. Now Cox has suddenly decided that a hearing would serve a useful purpose—anyway, he requested tomorrow's.

It must be that Cox's efforts to reopen the case are based on a desire only to "clear his reputation." Certainly he does not expect to be restored as president of the Phillies after selling his stock. And apparently it is no attempt to make a basis for legal action against Landis. If Landis says Cox admitted making bets, then he undoubtedly has his grounds for that charge. You can't walk into Landis' office and say "Good morning, Judge," without it being recorded by the dictaphones and stenographers Landis always has at his elbow.

Baseball Bombshell:

Judge Landis to Hold Rehearing in Cox Case

By Shirley Povich

New York, Dec. 3.—Another full-sized sensation erupted over the big league baseball scene today when Commissioner Kenesaw Landis announced he would hold a rehearing tomorrow for William D. Cox, the man he ousted as president of the Phillies and banished from baseball for life.

Cox, charged by Landis with betting on baseball games, demanded the hearing through his new attorney, Lloyd Paul Stryker. Landis, who delights in startling announcements, not only granted the rehearing, but told baseball writers it would be an open session at his New York hotel.

Landis stated Cox had asked the rehearing in an effort "to clear his name," and was now denying that he had bet on games while president of the Phils.

Cox's banishment was announced by Landis eleven days ago when the commissioner, in a formal declaration, stated that Cox had admitted making bets on games.

Bucky Harris, discharged as manager of the Phillies in late July by Cox, has been summoned to the hearing as have Jimmy Hagen, road secretary of the Phillies; Bill Phillips public relations man of the club; George Fletcher, secretary-treasurer, and Nathan Alexander, an office employe.

In his new denial that he had bet money on games, Cox, through his attorney, declared he had never wagered anything more than a hat and that "I admitted to the commissioner that I had made bets only as a means of testing the loyalty of one of my associates."

Refused to See Landis

Following his ouster by Landis, Cox, in a radio broadcast, declared he had made "only a few small and sentimental bets before I learned of the rule against this. . . . I now find that because I admitted backing my team with a few bets I have been banned from the game I love for the rest of my life."

His banishment by Landis followed Cox's refusal to attend a hearing called by Landis for December 4. Before than date, Cox advised Landis he had sold his holdings in the Phillies and that "the hearing would serve no useful purpose."

Landis then notified Cox that he was banished from the game for life, with Landis recalling that "you stated to me in New York on November 3 that you had placed through a bookmaker "approximately 15 or 20 bets of some $25 to $100 per game on Philadelphia to win."

Neither Landis nor Cox would amplify today the statement that Cox had admitted making the bets merely "to test the loyalty of one of my associates."

Cox told newspapermen tonight that "I cannot say more until the hearing tomorrow. Needless to say, I would not have requested the hearing if I did not believe I would win complete exoneration."

Considered Closed Issue

The Cox case, a bombshell when Landis announced his banishment nearly two weeks ago, was considered a closed issue until today when Landis suddenly revealed that it was being reopened. The 77-year-old czar of baseball made the announcement in casual conversation with newspapermen and appeared delighted at their amazement that a new hearing would be held.

Cox has changed attorneys since selling out his holdings in the Phillies. Formerly he was represented by Charles Grimes. Styker, his present attorney, was the counsel for Jimmy Hines, Tammany politician, who is now in Sing Sing.

In discussing the reopening of the Cox case, Landis revealed that Stryker had telephoned him last Saturday asking for the new hearing and declaring that "Mr. Cox has not told you all the facts."

Landis told newspapermen today that "if Cox can convince me that he did not make bets on the games, I will issue a public statement clearing him on the charges."

Randolph Field Places Trio on All-S.W. Club

Dallas, Tex., Dec. 3 (AP).—Randolph Field's Ramblers, who played a heavier schedule than most colleges, yet landed in the Cotton Bowl, came up with three men on the first All-Southwest service football team.

Glenn Dobbs, former Tulsa All-America passer who led the Ramblers to nine victories, heads the Randolph trio on the all-star eleven. He was everybody's choice. Reasons: 105 passes for 1408 yards; some of the greatest punting Texans have ever seen; and consistent sparking of Randolph running plays.

THE SELECTIONS

Ends—Jack Russell, Blackland Field, Tex., and John Svenson, Norman, Okla., Naval, a former Lafayette star.

Tackles—Al Baisi, Camp Robinson, Ark., former Chicago Bears and West Virginia U. performer, and Rafe Nabors, Lubbock Air Field, Tex., former Detroit Lions player.

Guards—Delbert Davis, Randolph, and Marion Rogers, South Plains Field, Tex.

Center—Leiland Killian, Randolph.

Backs—Glenn Robbs, Randolph, former Tulsa; Rogers Smith, Lubbock Field; Connie Sparks, Kirtland Field, Albuquerque, N. M., and Leroy Fry, Abilene Air Base, Tex., the Nation's leading scorer as quarterback for Texas A. and I. in 1938.

SECOND TEAM

Ends—Leon Leinweber, Randolph, and Billy Carruth, Blackland.

Tackles—Norbert Harpring, Randolph, and James McWhorter, Lubbock.

Guards—Joe Vaughan, Randolph, and Dan McGlasson, Blackland.

Center—Robert Dutcher, Blackland.

Backs—Walter West, Randolph; Dick Geser, Ward Island; Buster Dixon, Lubbock, and Dave Currie, Norman Naval.

Redskins, Giants Even On Ground

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Sammy Baugh has never been at his best against the New York Giants, but a glance at the record book and the National Football League statistics gives the impression it will be up to Slingin' Sam to ice the Eastern Division championship for the 'Skins tomorrow in the Polo Grounds. Sam, on the passing side, and Coach Dutch Bergman in the mental department, are hard to beat at anytime.

The Giants, who have won four games, lost three and tied one, can hold the Redskins fairly even on the ground, figures show. Both teams have played the same number of games, eight, and the Redskins show only a nine-yard edge in rushing with 965 yards to 956. Compare those figures with the Eagles 1588 yards gained rushing.

The Giants are as tight as the 'Skins in giving up yards rushing. While opponents have made only 866 yards through the Redskins' forwards, statistics show the Giants have given up only 886 yards. The Phil-Pitt Eagles have given up only 618 yards rushing in nine games, which makes them tops per game on offense and defense in the league.

Five Running Touchdowns

The Redskins have scored only 5 touchdowns running the ball. Sammy Baugh has pitched 22 touchdown passes, Cafego 1 and 2 touchdowns have been scored on intercepted passes and 1 one a blocked kick. Giant ball carriers have trotted home 15 touchdowns rushing.

The Redskins are far superior to the Giants in the air. Tuffy Leemans and Emery Nix have completed approximately 4 passes in every 10, but only 6 for touchdowns, and not a New York pass receiver is listed in the first 15 in the league. O'Neale Adams, the 6-foot-6 end, who is one of the Giants' top receivers, is out of the game with a broken jaw and Will Walls, the other veteran flankman, will not be much of a pass-catching threat due to a knee injury.

Even up in ball carrying but a bad second in the passing department, the Giants figure to enter the game with a psychological edge, although their backs are to the wall. Steve Owen's boys know they can beat the Redskins, they've done it seven times to the Redkins' four victories, with one tie, since 1937. The Redskins may not be so sure, something usually happens in the Giant series.

The Redskins thought they won the 1939 game, the year of Bo Russell's field goal try in the fading seconds which was called wide. The Redskins should have beaten the Giants here last year when New York played 60 minutes without a first down, but they didn't.

On Borrowed Time

And after all, the pressure is not too great on the Giants. Sure, they have to win both games to remain in title contention, but after the first few games of the season they didn't even figure to be in the running at this late date. They're out for a lark, playing on borrowed time, as even if they should beat the Redskins this Sunday and next they'd have to beat them again for the Eastern championship, and maybe Philadelphia-Pittsburgh, too, and even the Giants, who think in terms of miracles, must realize that it's all a trifle far fetched.

Steve Owen has always been able to key a club for one big game. Tomorrow's is the one he must win, and although Steve must realize the title chase is a hopeless cause, he'd like to toss a real scare into the 'Skins. New York papers say the Giants are all pepped up. They're acting like school kids in practice with a lot of fire and chatter. What last Saturday looked to be two anti-climax games for the Redskins might turn into a rip-roarin' series.

Red Sox Pay $10,000 for Outfielder

By a Staff Correspondent

New York, N. Y., Dec. 3.—Bob Johnson's one-year term as a Washington outfielder came to an end today when he was sold outright to the Boston Red Sox for $10,000 cash after the Nats' attempts to use him as trading material snagged. Later in the day, Clark Griffith announced another sale—the disposal of Utility Infielder Alex Kampouris to the San Francisco Club of the Coast League.

The sale of the 37-year-old Johnson to Boston was effected following the breakdown of attempts to use the veteran outfielder in player deals with Cleveland, Chicago and Detroit.

Attempts at Trade Fail

Johnson was obtained by the Nats from the Athletics last winter in a trade that sent Outfielder Bobby Estalella and cash to Philadelphia. At the time, the Red Sox also dickered with the Athletics for Johnson, who was embroiled in a salary argument with Connie Mack after 11 years with the club.

"Our attempts to make a player swap for Johnson were futile," said Clark Griffith, Washington owner, "but we are hopeful of buying an infielder from the National League with the money we received from the Johnson and Kampouris sales."

With the Nats last season Johnson was the regular left fielder and an early sensation with his run-producing and lofty batting average, but he slumped sadly in the last half of the year and finished with an average of .265. He injured his left hand in a dressing-room scuffle with Pitcher Alex Carrasquel and missed several weeks of the season.

Griff Seeks Shortstop

Kampouris was bought from the Brooklyn club at the $7,500 waiver price early last season, but was never able to break into the regular line-up. Under his contract he could not be sent to the minor leagues during 1943. He threatened to retire from baseball unless he was traded to another major league club or to a California team.

Griffith is looking in the direction of the Chicago Cubs and the Cincinnati Reds for a shortstop. He is prepared to make an outright purchase if the player can be waived out of the National League. He turned most of his persuasive powers on the Cubs today. The Chicago team has three shortstops, Len Merullo, Tom York and Bill Schuster. Marullo is the man Griffith wants, but he would accept either of the others.

The Nats' owner revealed today that Buck Newsom has been withdrawn from the market. "I never did want to trade Newsom," Griffith said. "I only used his name to lay the groundwork for a deal that we might work out without trading Newsom. He tells me he is in shape and should have a good season and I believe him."

C. U. and Gallaudet Take Court Openers

Cardinals Trounce Fort Belvoir, 34 to 31

Waging a rally in the waning moments of the game the Catholic University cagers made a triumphal debut last night by clipping the Fort Belvoir quintet, 34 to 31, on the Cards' court. The Redbirds came to life, offensively, in the last two minutes of the game to rack up three baskets and a free shot that gave them the game after they had trailed the Soldiers throughout.

Fred Rice, jr., son of one of the Catholic cocoaches, inaugurated the winning spurt when he looped in an arching set shot that tied things up at 29-all with less than two minutes to play. Right behind him little Gene Szklarz scored a short one, but Lanky Jake Shirk, the Belvoir pivotman, knotted the count again when he caged a lay-up to make it 31-31.

Scanlon Sews Up Game

With 1:37 left, Szklarz cashed a charity shot on Hopkins' misdemeanor and just 10 seconds before the whistle, Dick Scanlon, Catholic's senior center, took a pass from Johnny Mercak and fired from close in to give the Cards the game.

Throughout the initial period both clubs were troubled with bad marksmanship, although the taller military aggregation was able to make up some with shots off the back boards.

At the opening whistle, Lieut. Ken Stoger's foul shot and a pair of baskets from close in by little Foster Hopkins gave Fort Belvoir a 5-0 lead before the Cards countered on a one-handed push shot by Johnny Mercak.

Throughout the period the Soldiers maintained a slight lead and they left the floor at half time with an 18-16 advantage.

Rice Ties the Count

As the second half opened, Rice hit with a lay-up to tie the count at 18-18, and thereafter the score was knotted no less than five times. In this period there was never more than 3 points between the teams. The Cards' stretch drive proved the margin.

Rice, Scanlon and Mercak led the evening's scoring with 9 points each, and Scanlon's defensive play in pulling rebounds off the boards was outstanding.

In a preliminary clash, Company A of the Catholic University Military contingent easily trounced Company B, 47 to 32. The winners were paced by Forward Earl Arnold with a total of 16 points.

Blues Score Over Bridgewater, 38-28

Gallaudet College opened its basketball season with an impressive 38-28 victory over Bridgewater College last night at Roosevelt High gym, coming back in the second half after a ragged start.

The Blues were held to a one-point margin, 14-13, for the first 20 minutes by the Virginians, who Thursday night opened a two-day invasion here by losing a 41-36 decision to American University in an overtime contest.

Led by Capt. Paul Baldridge and Roy Holcomb, each of whom tallied 14 points, the Blues increased the tempo of their offense and tightened their defense to score handily. Bob Houff, Bridgewater center, was high scorer for the night with 19 points. The Gallaudet defense permitted only Jamison and Flora, besides Houff, to register field goals.

AAU Refuses To Approve 2 Swim Marks

Columbus, Ohio, Dec. 3 (AP).—The swimming committee of the Amateur Athletic Union refused today at the fifty-fifth annual meeting to approve the 200-meter and 200-yard breast stroke records of Emmett J. Cashin.

The committee tabled a request that the Stanford swimmer's marks be approved, because of a question regarding the leg action used. The Californian set the marks April 10 at Palo Alto, Calif., and July 10 at Los Angeles.

There is a remote possibility, committee members said, that the timing committee might reverse the finding.

Indications that a fight for the presidency of the national body was in prospect were seen as the Metropolitan Association, centered in New York, lined up behind the candidacy of James E. Roche of New Haven, current first vice president. President L. DiBenedetto of New Orleans held heavy support from other sections of the country.

Today's opening sessions were taken up with committee meetings to award 1944 championship tournaments, and to iron out other problems.

Alleys Open Sunday

Gaithersburg Bowling Alleys, located in the Gaithersburg (Md.) Fire Department Building, will reopen Sunday. The alleys will open 1 p. m. Sundays and 7 p. m. week days.

Bing Crosby Asks Pro Football Okay For Los Angeles

Los Angeles, Dec. 3 (AP).—Bing Crosby applied today for permission to sponsor an 11-week season of professional football between Eastern and Western teams this winter in the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum.

While the crooner-actor did not disclose his plans in detail, it was learned the games would embrace professional talent exclusively, with the personnel from the National Pro League. Associated with Crosby in the project are Capt. Graham T. Smith of the U. S. Marine Corps and Frank Menuel, Chicago sportsman.

Police Boys Club Presents Awards To Players, Teams

One hundred boys were awarded certificates of merit and three championship teams received silver trophies last night at the Ambassador Hotel as Police Boys' Club League football players were tendered their annual banquet.

Trophies were presented to the 90-pound eleven from No. 11, all-city champion; 125-pound team from No. 11, and the 140-pound club from No. 4 by "Dutch" Bergman, Redskin coach, and Sammy Baugh and George Cafego, Redskin backfield stars.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, former superintendent of police and founder of the Police Boys' Club, congratulated the boys on their achievements and sportsmanship, heading a list of guests which also included Robert C. Simmons, president of the Touchdown Club, and Lieut. Comdr. Max Farrington, U. S. N., former director of athletics at George Washington University.

Todd, Juzwik, Ex-Redskins, On All-West Service Eleven

Chicago, Dec. 3 (AP).—A fast, versatile backfield behind a jolting line averaging 222 pounds per man—that's the setup of the 1943 Midwestern all-star service team selected for the Associated Press by football coaches and their assistants at Great Lakes, Camp Grant, Fort Riley, and Iowa Preflight.

Only two players won positions by unanimous acclaim — Center Vince Banonis and Halfback Dick Todd, both of the Iowa Seahawks.

Banonis, who played a year with the Chicago Cardinals after leaving the University of Detroit, and Todd, a four-year veteran of the Washington Redskins, were two of seven former professionals who monopolized places on the honor role.

Average Age 25 Years

Average age of the first team is 25 years, ranging from 29-year-old Todd and Guard Russ Letlow of Great Lakes, to the "baby" of the outfit, 19-year-old Corwin Clatt of Camp Grant, Notre Dame's sensational sophomore fullback of 1942.

Although Clatt was handicapped with an injury, he was the warriors' top scorer. Another former Irish star, Steve Juzwik of Great Lakes, a 1942 freshman with the Washington Redskins, also made the first string but received close competition in the voting from Emil Sitko, a Notre Dame yearling last season and Great Lakes leading ground gainer this fall, and Frank Maznicki of the Seahawks, an outstanding rookie for the Chicago Bears.

Played With Injury

Juzwik also labored most of the campaign with an injury, but he was the Sailors' best scorer with 44 points.

Todd played his greatest game of the year against Notre Dame, his running and passing pacing the Seahawks to a pair of touchdowns which nearly spilled the Irish. He was carried from the field in the final quarter suffering a compound fracture of the jaw.

All-Star Service team:

Player, Team	Last Played	Pos.
Perry Schwartz, Seahawks	Brooklyn	E
Roman Bentz, Camp Grant	Tulane	T
Nick Kerasiotis, Seahawks	Bears	G
Vince Banonis, Seahawks	Cardinals	C

Backs—Caywood and Ford, Fort Riley; Storie, Camp Grant; Lach and Proctor, Great Lakes.

Bears Beaten By Stars, 35-31

Chicago, Dec. 3.—Paced by former members of the Illinois "Whiz Kids," the College All-Stars defeated the Washington Bears, world basketball champions, 35-31, in a fiercely fought game before 23,825 fans in Chicago Stadium tonight.

The two teams battled at top speed in the first half and left the floor with the score tied at 17-all.

Phillip's 66 of Bartlesville, Okla., national A. A. U. basketball champions, controlled the rebounds and effectively monopolized the ball to defeat Dow Chemical of Midland, Mich., 49-31, in the preliminary.

Ruffin Able to Keep Both Fight Dates

New York, Dec. 3 (AP).—Although Bobby Ruffin, New York lightweight contender, has been reclassified 1-A by his draft board he will be able to go through with both of his scheduled bouts with champions of his division.

Ruffin will get the customary 10 days and then three weeks, permitting him to meet Sammy Angott, the NBA titleholder, and Beau Jack, New York State champ, in Madison Square Garden, December 17 and January 7, respectively.

Soldier West Rejoins Eagles Against Packers

Philadelphia, Dec. 3 (AP).—Hodges West, a Philadelphia Eagles tackle in 1941, will trade his Army uniform for moleskins on Sunday to aid his old team against the Green Bay Packers of the National Football League.

West, former University of Tennessee player, obtained permission from officers at a North Carolina post where he is stationed to play one last game with the Eagles while on furlough.

Miami High Scores 27th Straight Victory

Miami, Fla., Dec. 3 (AP).—Pete Williams broke loose on touchdown runs of 61 and 92 yards to lead undefeated Miami High School to a 27-to-7 victory over previously undefeated Boys High of Atlanta before 24,000 in the Orange Bowl tonight.

It was Miami's twenty-seventh consecutive game without defeat, the last setback coming at the hands of Boys High in 1940.

Crackers Buy Pair

New York, Dec. 3 (AP).—The Atlanta (Southern Association) Crackers bought two minor league players today in straight cash transactions. They acquired Murray Howell, outfielder, from the Jersey City Giants, and Mickey Haslin, veteran infielder and offseason brewery truck driver, from the Indianapolis Chiefs.

Football Lions' Line-up Selected

Coach Harry Graves of Washington's untied, undefeated Lions, last night named the starting line-up that will face the Negro world professional football champion Harrisburg (Pa.) Trojans at Griffith Stadium tomorrow afternoon

Graves, after a hard workout at the Banneker Recreation Center last night, announced that a revised backfield will find Sergt. "Red" Briscoe teamed with Mose Ford at the halves; Harvey Banks, former Howard University star, at quarterback, and Charley "Buck" Perry at fullback.

The Lion's line will feature Captain "Sodie" White at center; Bob White and Ed Tillman, ends; Big Hughes and Ted Bolding, tackles, and Sam Stovall and Linwood "Bear" Jackson, guards.

Post's All-High Team Selected

The Washington Post's All-High football team, selected by the eight inter-high coaches and officials, will appear in Sunday's Post, Section III.

Secretary of Navy Knox Well Satisfied With Football as Part of Training

Is the Navy satisfied with its policy of allowing its personnel to play football during preflight and college training programs?

"Very much so," says Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox.

He was asked for his comment as the first full season of the experiment came to a close.

Whether the same program will be projected into next season is a matter depending on many things so Knox isn't committing himself at this time.

But, Navy officials note, the order under which the policy came into existence has not been rescinded. This, coupled with Knox's expression of satisfaction over the tryout, seems to give odds-on likelihood that next season will see Navy players on the field again, the Associated Press reported.

More than 125 colleges were in the preflight and college training program (the Army didn't follow the same policy). Big name coaches were recruited to teach the game. Navy-manned teams representing colleges, and sailor trainees at the preflight schools turned in a creditable performance throughout the year.

SECRETARY KNOX

"We put on a big scale football program mainly because we believe the sport is an important phase of combat training," a high naval officer said yesterday. "And in so doing, we probably saved college football from oblivion."

Naval officers point out that even the few civilian college teams with adequate gridiron material would have found it difficult to arrange a schedule had it not been for Navy elevens.

"Hundreds of colleges and universities were forced to give up football for the duration," the naval spokesman said, "but scores of others were able to continue the sport because naval and marine trainees were permitted to participate.

Kirk Rides Five Straight at Charles Town

Captures Feature on Emerald Isle

By Walter Haight

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 3.—Jockey Carson Kirk of Silver Spring, one of the Nation's leading riders in the number of winners, was successful with all his mounts here today, getting five to the winner's circle. Four of these came in a row at the start of the program. He was idle in the fifth but came back in the sixth, the featured Stokes Hammond Purse, and drove W. M. Beougher's Empire Isle home to victory.

Empire Isle, his last mount on the program, was the longest price of his winners, paying $15. The 4-year-old son of Jean Bart was clocked in 1:27 1-5 over a fast track and before some 3500 customers.

Rode Daily Double

Kirk rode both ends of a $14.80 daily double. He began the day aboard J. E. Crider's Comedy Player and booted the $3.80 shot home by some two and a half lengths. His second chance was on Randle's Queen, owned by Raymond See of Washington. He put up a strong finish to get the 6-year-old mare home ahead of C. W. Davis' Storminess by a neck margin.

In the third race, Kirk climbed into the saddle of Mrs. J. H. Elliott's War Smoke, took the Constitution mare to the front in the opening furlong and kept her there. War Smoke paid $7.80. Mrs. Thomas Bonham's First Family was his fourth straight winner. He booted this daughter of Jock home ahead of the favorite, A. H. Taylor's Bell Soma.

Favorite Runs Wide

Kirk sat in the jockey's room while Ken Robertson won the fifth with Charles Houston's Groucher's Boy and then came out to make it five for the day on the aforementioned Empire Isle. He was aided this time when the favorite, G. W. Farr's Ashame got out of control of Jockey Willie Rudert and ran out at the turn into the stretch while holding what appeared to be a safe lead.

Notes: J. L. Friedman claimed Mae Case for $1,400. This was the first transaction of its kind at the meeting. Jockey Tommy Coucci arrived. He is a cousin of the late Jockey Silvio Coucci, a leading rider of a decade ago. This track has been paying stable grooms $5 for bringing a winner to the paddock for years. Russ (WOL) Hodges will make his semiannual appearance at Charles Town tomorrow. Dick Miles is doing a good job as outrider here. The fat pony he uses has been dubbed "Walter Haight, jr." That 40 1-5 for the four and a half furlong course, shown by Roman Boy is going to scare off a lot of rivals. Miss Ethel, the Marlboro star, trys the same route tomorrow carrying 116 pounds.

NTS Glovers Take Honors First Night

The National Training School took a flying start as the novice division of the annual Golden Gloves tournament got under way last night at Turner's Arena.

Seven of Coach Bill McGeever's gladiators worked their way to the second round of the show which is to be staged next Friday night.

The outstanding fight of last night's card was between Willie Canard of the Washington Boys' Club and Willie Gable of the Merrick Club, which Gable won after three stirring rounds. While Canard was on the floor four times, he came off the canvas each time and staggered his rival.

Max Brenner of the Washington Boys' Club, Frankie Sweeney of the Merrick Club, Bobby Barry of the National Training School and William Gable stood out as top rivals for the Congressman Fred A. Hartley award to the best novice boxer.

A gallery of 1400 fans witnessed the opening battles.

135-pound class—Billy Goettling (unattached) won technical knockout over Simon Garcia (Fort Meade), 1 minute 34 seconds, first round; Bernie Barry (National Training School) outpointed John Mason (Pete's A. C.), three rounds; John Crowell (Pete's A. C.) forfeited to Bob Kaiser (Bolling Field), three rounds; Bernard Shatz (Mount Rainier Boys Club) won technical knockout over Johnny Murphy (Gallaudet), 34 seconds, first round.

147-pound class—Harold Taylor (National Training School) knocked out Robert Clark (Gallaudet), 1 minute 27 seconds, first round; Dan Hollon (Apollo A. C.) forfeited to Pete Troilo (National Training School); Max Brenner (Washington Boys Club) won technical knockout over Irving Bridges (Apollo A. C.), 1 minute 30 seconds, second round; James Foeste (Apollo A. C.) won technical knockout over Hugh Hill (National Training School), 1 minute 14 seconds, third round; Cliff Hart (Pete's A. C.) outpointed Bob Newberry (Apollo A. C.), three rounds.

William Gable (Merrick Club) outpointed Willie Canard (Washington Boys Club), three rounds; Henry Pauluccl (Merrick Club) won technical knockout over Marvin Rizza (National Training School), 2:35, third round; Francis Sweeney (Merrick Club) won technical knockout over Bob Schultz (Washington Coast Guard Radio School), 1:55, second round; Thomas Ripne (Gallaudet) outpointed Stan Levin (unattached), three rounds.

Kane to Get Latsios Shot if Winner Monday

A long-awaited crack, once denied him at the last minute, at undefeated Nick Latsios, former Alexandria Golder Glover, now a corporal with the Army Air Force at Bolling Field, awaits Eddie Kane, local Coast Guardsman, if he gets over Charley Bennett, Baltimore Negro, in the six-round semifinal to the Georgie Parks-Lee Oma 10-round heavyweight fuss at Turner's Arena Monday.

Kane was scheduled to meet Latsios a couple of months ago but the bout was postponed at the last minute when Latsios failed to meet weight requirements. In Latsios' stead, Bennett was substituted. It turned out to be a horrible nightmare for Kane who dropped the decision in an upset. Previously, in Baltimore, Bennett's home town, Kane had whipped Charley just as decisively as Bennett whipped him in the return go. Thus Monday's bout is their "rubber" match.

Yesterday, Matchmaker Gabe Menendez received assurances from Latsios that he would meet Kane, should the local Coast Guardsman topple Bennett Monday. Latsios agreed to take the match with the stipulation that he make 147 pounds the day of the fight, give or take a pound. Should Bennett again upset Kane, Menendez hopes to match the "Golden Greek" with Charley. Kane, who did not fight since his upset at the hands of Bennett until last week, featured his comeback with a two-round kayo over Clarence McNeil in Harrisburg.

Meanwhile, Parks, local Negro who has twice bowed to the good-looking Oma in Baltimore, winds up training today at the 12th St. Y. M. C. A. and is reported to be in the best shape of his up-and-down career. Oma, training in New York with big shots, with Jimmy Bivins and possibly Lee Savold, cannot afford to be in other than his best physical trim against the ever-dangerous punching Parks.

Coach Shipley Still Ponders Court Material at Maryland

Burton Shipley, veteran coach of the University of Maryland basketball team, hopes to gain some definite idea today about the material on hand for his 1943-44 cage outfit.

Admittedly, the situation isn't bright, with only one member of last year's squad back, and the only other experience resting between two substitutes from last year's freshman club.

The varsity reserve is Erny Engelbert, the only 6-footer on the squad of 25. The recruits from the freshman squad are Jack Flynn and Charley Hiden.

Half a dozen football players came out for the court squad this week, and Shipley plans an intra-squad game tomorrow. He expects to pick his varsity squad following this workout.

Macricostas to Head Next Wrestling Card

George Macricostas, the Golden Greek, who whipped the Black Mask this past Thursday at Turner's Arena, has been signed to headline next Wednesday night's show. Macricostas beat The Mask in 13 minutes after a slam-bang battle.

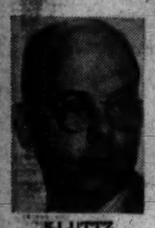
The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Busbey Playing Politics, Says UFWA Official

Eleanor Nelson, secretary-treasurer of the United Federal Workers of America, yesterday cracked back at Representative Busbey, Illinois Republican, who she said was playing partisan politics in his attempts to link the union to pro-Communist activities. Earlier the Civil Service Commission flatly denied Busbey's charge that the union had pressured it into making changes in its practice of investigating applicants for Federal jobs. In fact, the commission won't admit that any substantial changes were made, but that it was forced to reaffirm its policies in a memo to its investigators after the UFWA had presented evidence that its instructions had been ignored in several cases.



KLUTTZ

Miss Nelson said she was shocked and angered by Busbey's charges. To show the "incorrectness and irresponsibility" of the legislator's statements, she said that the UWFA had followed only one "line"—that of the Congress of Industrial Organizations and she said the union will continue to follow the CIO leadership of President Philip Murray. She denied that Kenneth Decker had resigned in September, 1940, in protest against the union's policies as charged by Busbey. She said Decker remained an officer of UFWA until he left the Government to join the Army. She denied that the union had agitated against conscription and she said the Congressman's charge that UFWA had pulled a strike against the Social Security Board in Baltimore was "a lie." Miss Nelson ignored Busbey's charges on her pro-Communist connections.

"It is too bad," Miss Nelson said, "that he (Busbey) didn't do his own investigating and prepare his own speech to the House . . . the UFWA has reason to believe," she said, "that Busbey's speech was based on material furnished by a discredited journalist who is now using the third name he has employed in 10 years." She pointed out that the only interest he has hitherto expressed in Federal workers was his vote to deny them overtime pay in a period when living costs were soaring. She said his attack was on the Administration, the three million Federal workers, and on the entire labor movement. She said the UFWA always welcomed the investigations designed to uncover persons who attempt to overthrow the Government by force and violence and who are sympathetic to the enemies of our country.

Busbey may not know it, but the Civil Service instructions that he's making so much fuss about were initiated by a fellow Republican, but a liberal and fair-minded Republican, Arthur S. Flemming, the minority member of the Civil Service Commission. And when the Commission is called before the Dies or any other Congressional Committee to defend the instructions which were designed to protect the civil liberties of persons aspiring for Federal jobs it will be Flemming who'll be out in front defending them. Furthermore, Flemming will have plenty of support on Capitol Hill for many people now realize that the Constitution would have to be rewritten if the Commission were to follow the wishes of some people in the selection of Federal workers.

Civil Service Status

The Civil Service Commission yesterday resumed its practice of giving permanent status to Federal workers, but only a small number will be eligible for it. To be eligible you had to be in the employ of the Federal Government on March 15, 1942, and you must have a good record of service since that time. No one appointed since March 16, 1942, can get a permanent status, as all appointments since that time have been for the duration of the war and six months thereafter. The agency in which you're employed must recommend you for permanent status, but you can get information on your case by going to the status division in room 150 of the Civil Service Commission or by calling branch 663 at the commission.

Christmas Dinner

District residents will share their homes on Christmas day with Government workers who will be unable to be with their families. And most Federal workers must remain in the city as they can't get annual leave if they plan to use public transportation. Washington residents will try to give the Federal workers a Merry Christmas by inviting them for Christmas dinner. The project is sponsored by the Washington Federation of Churches, personnel offices in Federal agencies, and The Washington Post. You can get full information from your personnel office . . . Federal Diary of the Air, 4:35 tomorrow over WRC.

Charter Discussion

The first of a series of discussions on the proposed charter government for Montgomery County, Md., will be held by the Takoma Park Community League Monday at 8 p. m. in the Health and Welfare Center, 8 Columbia ave., Takoma Park, Md.

Dr. J. A. Le Clerc will outline articles in the charter. The group plans to hold monthly discussions and analyses in order to give voters an understanding of the subject before voting on the issue in 1944.

Lovett, Dodd, Watson Sue For Back Pay

Challenging the constitutionality of the action of Congress depriving them of their salaries on the ground that they were "subversive," Goodwin B. Watson, William E. Dodd, jr., and Robert Morss Lovett filed suit yesterday in the Court of Claims against the United States.

Although each of the men ask in his suit for only one week back salary, the purpose of the action, according to Attorney Charles Horsky, is to restore their jobs and to have section 304 of the Urgent Deficiency Appropriation Act, 1943, declared void.

Lovett is executive assistant to the Governor of the Virgin Islands, and employed at $4600 a year base pay. Watson was chief of the Analysis Division, Foreign Broadcast Intelligence Service, Federal Communications Commission, and receiving $6500 a year. Dodd, an assistant news editor, Federal Communications Commission, made $3200 a year.

On July 12, 1943, Congress said that no part of any fund should be paid to the three men unless prior to that time they had been appointed by the President with the approval of the Senate. The effective date for the stoppage of salary was set at November 15.

The suits state that the Congress unconstitutionally encroached on the power of the President and also has deprived the three men of their right to due process of law.

"The proceedings before the Special Subcommittee of the House Committee on Appropriations . . . were secret and not public, and were conducted without opportunity for plaintiff to know what charges were to be made against him, to prepare a defense of any kind, to be represented by counsel, to produce witnesses in his behalf, to cross-examine witnesses, to confront his accusers, or to employ the compulsory process of the committee in his behalf. Section 304 is arbitrary special legislation."

Lovett's suit quotes Secretary Harold L. Ickes as saying, "I wish to repeat the request that you continue in the office of executive assistant to the Governor. Funds may not be available to pay your salary until the unconstitutional prohibition of the Urgent Deficiencies Act is declared invalid by the courts. I am confident, however, that the prohibition will be so adjudged, and a principle fundamental to democratic government will be upheld."

Churches Hit Liquor Traffic, Lottery Plan

Alleged laxity in liquor control, wrestling matches and a proposed Federal lottery to raise five billion dollars a year were the targets for three resolutions passed yesterday by the Washington Federation of Churches, meeting at its headquarters, 1751 N st. nw.

The federation's resolution on liquor proposed that the Senate District Committee launch a probe into liquor control in the District "with a view to effecting a radical change in the law that will provide a form of liquor control which will be at least as effective as any plan in any part of the United States."

Wrestling, the Federation pointed, out is not controlled by law as is boxing. Especially was the group concerned over matches which have been promoted between women.

The women's matches the resolution charged, "are of a questionable character from a moral viewpoint and are described even by experts as more in the nature of burlesque shows than wrestling matches." The resolution requests legislation which would expand the jurisdiction of the boxing commission to include wrestling.

The proposed Federal lottery which the federation opposes is called for in a bill introduced recently by Senator Guffey (Democrat) of Pennsylvania.

Under the plan, charitable, fraternal, philanthropic and church organizations would sell lottery tickets at $2 each and keep 2 per cent commission. The purpose of the lottery, according to the bill, would be "to encourage voluntary contributions to aid in prosecuting the war."

First Prewar Fathers Called To Fort Myer in D. C. Draft

PRE-PEARL HARBOR FATHER CALLED: Robert C. Martin, 37, Navy Yard pipefitter who faces draft physical examination, Monday. Shown with him are his wife and two sons, John, 3, and Thomas, 5 months

Six pre-Pearl Harbor fathers, the first drafted in the District in the regular sequence of Selective Service numbers, will report to Fort Myer, Va., Monday for physical examinations preliminary to induction.

HATCH

Only the inductees who go into the Army will be able to spend Christmas with their wives and children because the Army is the only branch of the armed forces that grants a three-week furlough after induction. All six men are registered with District Draft Board No. 20.

All of the fathers have small children and if they are inducted, it will result in a hardship on their families, they said. Joseph John Caruso, 34, is the father of five boys, ranging in age from 4 to 13 years. Caruso, a florist at Fourteenth st. and Columbia rd. nw., said that his wife does not work and does not think she should because of the children. They live at 1437 Otis st. ne.

Chester Morgan Graves, 35, a masseur at the Metropolitan Club, is the father of a 4-year-old boy and a 6-month-old daughter. If he passes his physical examination, his wife will try to keep their house but if the expense is too great, she will return with the children to her parents, she said.

Robert Cyrus Martin, 37, a pipefitter at the Navy Yard for three years, has two boys—a 2-year-old and a 5-month-old. Mrs. Martin explained "we've saved a little money and I think we can get by with the allotment. I haven't worked since the baby was born and can't work now because we can't get anyone to take care of him." They live in an apartment at 1935 18th st. se.

Also scheduled to go to Fort Myer are Harold J. Hatch, 27, father of an 18-month-old baby; Charles Kenneth McConkey, 22, father of one child, and William Oscar Buckingham, 32, father of a 4-year-old son. Buckingham, field manager and salesman for the Fuller Brush Co., lives at 2522 Third st. S., Arlington, Va.

Law Protects D. C. From Loss In Tax Sales

The District is enabled by law to protect itself from financial loss when property owners fail to pay back taxes and tax sales fail to produce buyers, Corporation Counsellor Vernon West said yesterday.

Since 1936, when the Phipps Act was passed to prevent loss, the District Government has been authorized to institute court proceedings to sell such delinquent properties to the highest bidder. Previous to the act's passage, its only recourse was to wait for the annual tax sales when a sale could not be made unless the bidder was willing to pay an amount equal at least to the total delinquent payments.

Since many of the properties often owed the District anywhere up to a $1000—and frequently were actually worth no more than $2000—buyers would refuse to pay the $3000 necessary to meet the regulations. The result was that the local government was "stuck" both with properties and unpaid taxes.

An earlier report this week stated that "hundreds" of slum properties are now delinquent in their payments. But according to the information received yesterday from the District assessor's office, the Phipps Act has been regularly invoked in procedures against their owners.

Seven Injured In 3 Traffic Accidents Here

Seven were injured, four seriously, yesterday in three traffic accidents, one a streetcar crash at New York ave. and 14th st. nw.

Seriously injured and admitted to Emergency Hospital as the result of the streetcar accident were Policeman John J. Forbes, 26, of 3368 Alden pl. ne., who was directing traffic at the intersection, and Anna Morris, 40, Negro, of 1118 1st st. sw., a passenger on one of the cars.

Police reported that the accident was caused by a Bureau of Engraving car, southbound on 14th st., splitting the switch so that the rear end of the car swung west into New York ave., striking the policeman, while the front end swung east, colliding with a Mount Pleasant car, northbound on 14th st.

In another accident at 8th st. and Rhode Island ave. ne., John Harvey, 28, of 2007 3d st. ne., was seriously injured when the car he was riding in collided with the rear of another. He was admitted to Casualty Hospital. The driver of the car the victim was in was Conley E. Galliher, 28, of Cheverly, Md., police reported, and the driver of the other car Theodore P. Hamilton, 29, of Riverdale, Md.

Other victims of the uptown street car crash, released after treatment at Emergency Hospital were: Lilly Simmons, 38, of 1867 Park rd. nw.; Nelson Spriggs, 20, Negro, of 1625 One-Half st. sw., and Elizabeth Sutherland, 54, of 1732 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Earlier in the day the death of 5-year-old Robert Long of 2015 4th st. ne., who was killed Wednesday when he was struck by a trailor truck at 4th and W sts. ne., was termed accidental by a coroner's jury yesterday.

65 District Men To Report Monday

Sixty-five Washington men, including 29 Negroes, will report Monday for active duty with the armed services, District Selective Service headquarters announced yesterday.

The following white men, inducted November 15, will go to the Army:

Andrew M. Hallas, David G. Edelen, James F. Cunningham, Jack Sandler, Ben Posner, Otion Bass, Leonard Messell, Melvin A. Richards, Francis M. Shey, Hamm H. Moy, Steve J. Novotny, Joseph A. Biddle Offers Alternative to McNabb Rule

Attorney General Francis Biddle yesterday suggested "a little more flexibility" in the terminology of legislation affecting the time-of-arraignment element in admissibility of evidence.

Biddle testified before a House District Judiciary Subcommittee which is considering a bill introduced by Representative Hobbs (Democrat) of Alabama providing "that no failure to observe the requirement of law as to the time within which a person under arrest must be brought before a magistrate, commissioner, or court, shall render inadmissible any evidence that is otherwise admissible." The Hobbs bill, if passed, would counteract the famed McNabb decision handed down by the Supreme Court, requiring arraignment "without unnecessary delay."

Would Remove Sanction

The Attorney General declared that if the bill were enacted, it would remove the sanction which the Supreme Court has devised to implement the right of an arrested person to immediate arraignment, "but the right itself would remain."

"In view of the stringency of recent decisions, I suggest a little more flexibility such, for example, as a standard requiring arraignment 'within a reasonable time.' Such a standard would, I think, assist materially in the typical situation where arraignment seems to me to be justifiably delayed, namely, in cases where arraignment of one of a number of suspected persons will operate to forewarn those of the accomplices who have not yet been arrested," he said.

Cites Case of Saboteurs

As an example, he cited the case of the eight saboteurs captured last year by the Coast Guard on the New Jersey coast, six of whom were executed in the electric chair.

"I have prepared a draft of a bill to accomplish this objective, should the committee view this alternative approach with favor," Biddle said. "I may add that under the standard I propose I believe that the cases that have attracted attention, where the delay in arraignment was brief and reasonably explained, would have been decided the other way."

Fasting Rules Eased for Catholics

Archbishop Michael J. Curley of the Archdioceses of Baltimore and Washington announced yesterday that for the first time in history of the dioceses the church regulations on fasting and, abstinence have been relaxed for the duration of the war.

Effective tomorrow Catholics will not be required to fast excepting on Christmas Eve, on Ash Wednesday, and on Fridays during Lent.

The action was taken "in view of the increasing difficulties in obtaining a normal variety of foods, and of the fact that so many of our people are now required to work much longer hours."

Abstinence days, on which meat may not be eaten, were limited to Christmas Eve and Ash Wednesday, and all Fridays.

City News In Brief

General George to Be Guest

Maj. Gen. H. L. George, chief of the United States Air Transport Command, will be honor guest in the observance of Air Forces Day from 1:30 to 5:30 p. m. today at the National Press Club Canteen for servicemen in the Press Club auditorium. The entertainment program will consist of acts from the Capitol Theater and songs by Miss Bernice Parks.

To Close Potomac Bridge

The emergency pontoon bridge across the Potomac River at the foot of Wisconsin ave. nw. will be indefinitely closed to traffic beginning today, the U. S. Engineer Office announced yesterday. The river channel will remain open for navigation at all times.

Objector Sentenced

Hyman Abosh, 27, who claimed his religion of "Jewish Quaker" made him a conscientious objector, was sentenced yesterday by Justice David A. Pine to one to four years imprisonment for failing to report for induction under the Selective Service Act. Abosh pleaded guilty and told the court he would rather go to jail than go into the Army.

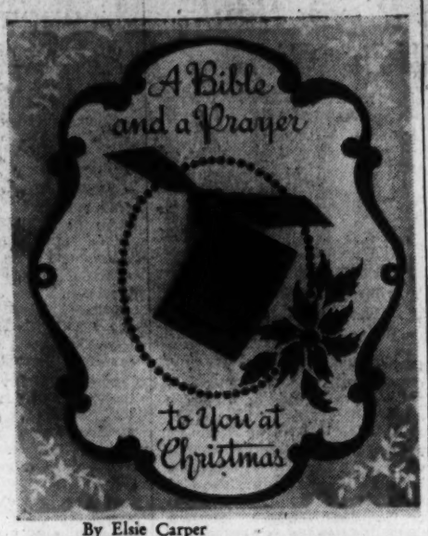
38 Yanks in New Guinea Reply To D. C. Girl's Yule Message

A Christmas card containing a prayer and a Bible sent by "A Washington Girl" to "someone in the service without mail" reached instead 38 men in New Guinea, and yesterday they returned it with its sentiments re-directed to "All the Folks Back Home." The letter was signed by 38 men from a major on down.



By Elsie Carper

Thirty-eight American soldiers in New Guinea who received a Christmas prayer sent by "A Washington Girl" wish "A Very Merry Christmas" to her and to all of "the Folks Back Home."

Addressed to "someone in the service without mail," the Christmas card containing a miniature Bible and the earnest prayer that whoever it reached would find happiness this Yuletide, was received by the men in a New Guinea Finance Office, who sent it to The Post asking that their appreciation and gratitude be publically expressed.

Wish for Happiness

"At this Christmas Season and throughout the New Year," the card said, "may you be blessed with every happiness for the splendid work you are doing and may you soon be on the way home again."

"I hope that Santa may be able to visit you and the other boys," the unidentified girl added. "We are all pulling for you and may victory soon be yours and may it be for all who are fighting for the right cause. I guess by the time this reaches its destination the snow will be falling and your Christmas dinner will be cooking—I hope."

15,000-Mile Journey

To the card which has traveled almost 15,000 miles the officers and men appended this note:

"In appreciation of the friendly thoughts conveyed by this card, which, it seems to us, not only comes from "A Washington Girl" but from all our loved ones back home, we the undersigned, would like to convey our appreciation, gratitude, and "A Very Merry Christmas," not only to "A Washington Girl" but also to "The Folks Back Home." It was signed "with a hope and a prayer that we shall all be home soon again," with the names of 38 men in New Guinea.

Open Your Home at Christmas To Cheer Lonely in District

By Robert Tate Allan

Recall those pangs of loneliness on your first Christmas away from mom and dad? Pretty sad occasion, wasn't it?

Remember how you sat, perhaps, in a bleak boarding house in a strange city, and, with tear-dimmed eyes, thought about that Christmas tree at home, dad carving the turkey with all the trimmings, and the relatives dropping in to wish you "a Merry Christmas"?

Your Heart Was Hungry

Remember how the boarding house owner tried to cheer you up with a good dinner, but somehow the food was tasteless? Your heart was hungry.

Well, thousands of warworkers and service personnel in this teeming war capital will be lonesome this Christmas Day. Many will stand in cafeteria lines. Some will be only a short distance from home, but they don't want to pack the railroads and keep servicemen from seeing their families. Some of them will be from across the seas, in a land that is strange and new to them.

But you, Mr. and Mrs. Washington, can help make a happy Christmas for these strangers in your city. Here's how:

For the second consecutive Christmas, The Washington Post will cooperate with the defense commission of the Washington Federation of Churches and Government personnel departments in sponsoring a "Share Your Home at Christmas" project.

The names of prospective hosts and hostesses will be cleared through the Defense Commission, and the names of prospective guests thruogh the Government employe counselors. Cooperating with Donald F. Bautz, defense commission director, will be Miss Laura Nicholson, executive secretary of the coordinating council of home hospitality; Chester Junek, chairman of the program committee of the Federal recreation committee, and Marshall Stalley, chief of the community activities section of the War Department.

Teas Scheduled

According to Bautz, a number of teas are being planned for Sunday, December 19, to which prospective hosts and guests participating in the "Share Your Home" project will attend to get better acquainted with each other.

If you want to be a Christmas Day host, just fill out the coupon below, and mail to the Federation of Churches' Defense Commission, 1751 N st. nw.

"Share Your Home at Christmas"

Agencies Study Policemen's Juvenile Delinquency Plan

Spokesmen for the FBI and District agencies concerned with the juvenile delinquency problem yesterday indicated that results of Patrolman Oliver A. Cowan's work with some 700 former gang members would be closely watched as a possible solution to several aspects of the problem in Washington as a whole.

Declaring that while it is too early yet to say whether Cowan's methods will be widely applicable, an FBI spokesman said that, in his opinion, it is "one of the most progressive steps" taken by the law-enforcement agency in this community.

Robert L. Haycock, District Superintendent of Schools, also stated that the decrease in crime among the group Cowan has worked with may indicate a new approach toward the delinquency problem.

The experiment, in which youthful gangs of potential lawbreakers were organized to study their own problems and work out solutions, will be brought before the Board of Education's Committee on Juvenile Delinquency when it meets next week, Haycock said.

The promising results in the case of these youngsters seems to show that children can be encouraged through joining clubs to overcome the influences of inadequate home environments, he said.

Morton Gives Version of Bloodstains

John Walter Morton, 39, draped a leg over the arm of a witness chair in District Court yesterday and calmly told the jury hearing the charge of second degree murder against him that he was the victim of a chain of circumstances which made him defendant in the bludgeon-death of Mrs. Grace G. Groome in Rock Creek Park.

Morton took the stand in his own defense before Chief Justice Edward O. Eicher and for two hours rambled of experiences on August 28, the day of the murder, and attempted to explain away the incriminating evidence of a blood-stained shirt, pants and a bottle of whiskey.

The trial is to resume this morning at 9:30.

Claims Illness

Morton's trial was postponed yesterday from the morning to the afternoon after Assistant United States Attorney John Burke told the court Morton stated he was ill and refused to leave the cell block of the courthouse.

Dr. Richard M. Rosenberg, deputy coroner, examined Morton, who then was brought upstairs to the courtroom.

Morton admitted much of the testimony of other witnesses, but has not yet testified to entering Rock Creek Park on the day of the slaying. The battered body of Mrs. Groome was found on Sunday, August 29, by a strolling geologist.

Morton said he entered a barroom on 14th st. on the afternoon of the slaying and was approached by an "under-the-weather Viola, Vera or Violet."

Not Proud of Company

Morton said he didn't want to leave the restaurant with the woman, but that she insisted.

"I don't like to talk about her because she is—well—the deceased, I guess, but she was under the weather and I didn't want to be seen with her."

Then he attempted to explain away the whisky, stating he had purchased a bottle but prior to the time a previous witness had testified to.

Paints Own "Portrait"

"I'm going to give you my version and you can get an idea of what kind of fellow I am," he told the jury. He pointed his finger at the panel.

He said he left the "Vera or Viola or whatever her name is" and as he was walking down the street he felt a hard object in his back and a voice told him, "Keep on walking, you."

Morton testified he grappled with someone, was hit twice in the jaw, and that his clothes were covered by the blood.

Morton is a radio mechanic, was discharged from the Navy in 1932, and was arrested two days after the slaying. A bottle of whisky was at his bedside, and with it a newspaper turned to the story of the circumstances of the finding of the body of the 57-year-old stenographer.

Neely Sentenced to Die

Monroe D. Neely, 35, Negro, chewed gum complacently yesterday as he was sentenced by Justice David A. Pine in District Court to die in the electric chair March 3 for the murder of Policeman Charles R. Johnston.

Asked whether he had anything to say before sentencing, Neely replied casually, "I want appeal for a new trial."

Then, as Neely snapped his chewing gum, Justice Pine read off the death sentence which provided that Neely should be kept securely in the District Jail until electrocution between 10 a. m. and 2 p. m. March 3.

Basis For Appeal

Neely's attorneys said they would appeal the case on the ground that the jury was prejudiced by newspaper articles on the McNabb decision of the Supreme Court and were led to believe there was other evidence in the case which was not introduced. During the trial, Justice Pine was constrained under the McNabb decision to refuse entrance of a purported confession, because Neely was not arraigned "promptly and without delayed."

Had Shot His Wife

According to testimony in the trial, Neely first shot his wife Leona on May 8 in the chest and temple and as she law unconscious on the floor pumped two bullets into Johnston who had come to the home at 617 21st st. ne., to investigate the shooting. Neely denied the deliberate shooting of Johnston, stating he had shot down the stairs but wildly. The wife recovered.

The case was prosecuted by Assistant United States Attorney John W. Ingoldsby.

BARNABY

By Crockett Johnson

Hey, Mom. Will you take me to see Santa Claus so I can talk to him?
Why—yes, Barnaby. Of course.
I didn't think he believed in Santa Claus any more . . .
Jane never has. I've had to persuade her to take any interest at all in him, and—
Ma! You won't forget to take me to see Santa Claus this year, will you?
Whc. S this?
It's no trouble, Mr. O'Malley . . . We'd have gone to see Santa Claus anyway . . . We wouldn't spoil all our mothers' fun . . .

MAKE IT DO

Keep Pennies in Piggy Banks By Making 'Fill-In' Gifts

For recipes, addresses, bills—paint and decorate a file case with drawings.

This bread board holds most of the tools needed for household repairs.

The Marine was standing at a bus stop, surrounded by afternoon shoppers struggling with bundles. He watched them with speculative interest.

"Geez," he addressed himself to packages and humanity. "When I went downtown and saw the mobs . . . and the prices! . . . I decided to send stamps or bonds to MY relatives, even the kid sister."

That was a telling summary of the Christmas gift situation, we thought. Those of us who act in wholehearted agreement will have a larger bond roll of our own and a conscience free from the worry of having personally contributed to inflation.

But on most of our Christmas lists are names of those to whom we want to bring a different sort of cheer. We may want to shorten some dull moments for an invalid or repay the man whose "tip" led to our present apartment.

If this problem is yours, the solution may lie in making something for them—from odds and ends, from something old. While you work with a needle and thread, bits of ribbon, a paste pot or a screwdriver, you may salvage your nerves from Washington "jitters" along with the old relic you're working on.

Here's an idea: Rip off the cover of that old stocking box that has seen better days. Glue on new print or wallpaper, and it's ready to keep a desk drawer neat.

Turn the cheap framed flower print left by the last tenant into a dresser tray. If the old print is faded, remove the glass and substitute a flower cut from chintz. Paint the frame and add domed feet to the corners underneath.

Paint a knife tray to fill with little flower pots.

Social Studies Group to Hear Economist

Dr. Ruth Ayres of the National Consumer-Retailer Council, Inc., will speak at 6:30 p. m. Tuesday at the American Association of University Women's social studies dinner meeting. Her subject will be, "Postwar Plans Challenge the Consumer."

She has the degrees of M.A. from Radcliffe College and Ph.D. from the Robert Brookings School of Economics and Government, and is now on special assignment with the Department of State. She is the wife of Meredith Givens, formerly of the NRA, the New York State Department of Labor, and the Social Security Board.

In 1935-36 Dr. Ayres directed the "Cost of Living" survey of the New York State Department of Labor, and was on the consumer advisory board of the NRA. She gathered raw material for the National Resources Planning Board's book, "Consumer Incomes and Consumer Expenditures." Since 1937 she has been a representative for the national organization of the American Association of University Women on the board of the National Consumer-Retailer Council, and is now a member of the board of directors of the council. She has been associated with this group since the AAUW became an affiliate in 1937.

The mother of a 9-year-old son, Dr. Ayres was a former president of the New York City League of Women Voters, and at the inception of the rationing program wrote a booklet of simplification of the program for the layman. A meeting sponsored by the art appreciation group and the international relations committee, and the subject of "The Art of Greece and Present-Day Conditions in That Country," will be held Thursday at 8 p. m. in the Lounge. The speakers will be Madame Eleny Theodoridou Stimson, formerly professor of education and psychology in Athens, also Achilles Catsonis, special adviser to the Greek Embassy. During the evening a few slides illustrating the beauty of Grecian architecture will be shown.

(As Seen by the Rumor Set)

"Look quick! There goes Gillespie Tycoon!"

"Who's he?"

"Oh, the new big industrialist they've brought in to win the war."

"He looks terribly interesting."

"He is. I hear he's giving rushes to Mrs. Slinker Hopping and Mrs. Mike McPace."

"Already!"

"Yes, I understand he's quite a stepper—and, of course, he's not bringing his family along."

"What a break! Oh say WHO is that big brass hat just coming in?"

"Oh—that's Admiral Tinfoil."

"Really! Isn't he the one who got mixed up with some strip tease dancer?"

"No, that was General Buckram. By the way, isn't he covering himself with glory now overseas!"

"Yes, but I don't see how he stands it."

"Why?"

"Well, he's always specialized in blondes, and, of course, in that region . . . Say, I wonder whatever became of all those Moro wives Admiral Tinfoil is supposed to have here?"

"I don't know. They say he's running around now with some beautiful Spanish spy."

"Look at Senator Mudge. He's beginning to show his age."

"Oh, of course he has to get out to see all his girl friends."

"Is that Representative Plodd with him?

"Yes. By the way, I hear he has a girl in "Twist and Twirl."

"He would have! Now who is that funny looking man they're talking with?"

"That's Professor Graph. He's really the brains of PWZ."

"He's a typical professor."

"He's perfectly brilliant, but quite a chaser I understand. They say all he thinks about is girls."

"Oh, there goes Mrs. Paul Pundit, the wife of the commentator!"

"Which Mrs. Paul Pundit?"

"Are there more than one?"

"I understand there have been at least half a dozen."

"But he seems such a family man. He's always talking on the radio about his children."

"Well, he has the reputation of being girl crazy. Say, not to change the subject, but I understand Terry Skimm, the foreign correspondent, is back in this country to try to get his third wife to divorce him."

"But they were just married on his last leave."

"I know, but it seems some rich Arab took a fancy to him in Algeria and gave him a harem or something. Say, don't look now, but Morrison Dough the big dollar-a-year man's on your right."

"Really! Has he a—er—"

"Well, he goes around a lot with Mrs. Schuyler Steppit and Mona Teazle—oh yes, and Countess Torso."

"Say, who are those three men over there in a huddle whispering?"

"The one with the little mustache is Larry Lightfoot, you know, the man behind the scenes in the State Department that the debs are all so crazy about—they say he's out with a different one every night—and the man on his right is Harrison Blinker who's secretly coordinating the Army and Navy—"

"Is he the one who's supposed to have been in that wife-trading deal?"

"Yes, and the other one is Atterbury Hack, who writes all the speeches for all the big men in the Government. He's facing two suits for alienation of affections."

"Who is the funny old bird who's joined them?"

"That's Lord Antimacassar. He's here on some terribly important war mission. You know he's the boy friend of Francine Free, the novelist, but he's running around here constantly with some South American dancer. And then the other man is something very important in the war effort—I don't know just what, but anyway he sends an orchid every day to Mrs. Alexander Rhumba."

"Say speaking of the war, you know sometimes I wonder if——"

"If what?"

"We'll get it over as soon as we think."

National Woman's Party Names First Feminist Library Dec. 12

Bill of Rights Week, December 12-18, will be formally opened by the National Woman's Party with a meeting of the National Council Saturday, December 11, at the Alva Belmont House. State chairmen from all over the country will attend.

Special ceremonies naming the Florence Bayard Hilles Library, the only feminist library in the world, will follow at 4 p. m. Sunday, December 12. During the week, deputations from various States will call on their Congressmen to urge immediate action on the Equal Rights Amendment which will guarantee to women protection against discrimination based on sex. Women's national organizations cooperating in the equality campaign will feature the amendment on their programs.

Distinguished librarians and writers from neighboring cities and members of Congress will be honored guests at the library ceremonies. Archibald MacLeish, head of the Library of Congress and nationally known poet, will be the chief speaker. Dr. George F. Bowerman, for thirty years head of the Washington Public Library, and Miss Clara W. Herbert, present head, will also speak. Alice Paul, chairman of the National Woman's Party and of the World Woman's Party for Equal Rights, will formally name the library and present a name plaque which has been designed by Neuman S. Sudduth of the Evening Star art staff. Mona Lee, of the State Department, wife of Jose Munoz Marin, president of the Puerto Rican Senate, will preside.

The processional will be sung by the Yule Glee Club of the Eliot Junior High School, directed by Miss Hannah Bonnell. Soloists will be Mme. Margareta Zilliacus, recently from Finland, and Mrs. Faith Harlow Swank.

Mrs. Marie Moore Forrest is chairman in charge of arrangements. Assisting her will be the following committees: Hostesses: Miss Mabel Vernon, Mrs. Mary McCain, Mrs. Dora Ogle, Mrs. Karl Greene, Mrs. Ann Underwood, Mrs. Helen C. Veale and Miss Mary Alice Matthews. Decorations: Mrs. Maud Howell Smith. Speakers: Miss Mary Elizabeth Downey. Ushers: Miss Lola de Prado, Miss Olga Bogdanskey, Miss Shirley Bichoff, and Mrs. R. T. Shelton, Jr.

Naval Academy Woman's Club Holds Program Monday

The officers' wives of the Naval Academy Women's Club will hear one of the most attractive programs of the season Monday afternoon when Lucile Turner, Virginia's famous singer of Negro spirituals, and Helen Eldredge, eminent travel lecturer, appear on the afternoon's program.

Held in the Mirror Room at Carvel Hall in Annapolis, the group will gather for their monthly meeting at 3 o'clock.

Lucile Barrow Turner, the wife of a Lynchburg, Va., manufacturer, is one of the foremost composers and singers of Negro spirituals and blues in the country. Raised on a Virginia plantation, she first learned to love Negro music when "Uncle Robert," the colored houseman, took her as a child to prayer meetings. After a private school education and the study of music at Boston's New England Conservatory, she devoted herself to the study and singing of Negro music. She became so thoroughly familiar with it that she can create it as naturally as the Negroes themselves.

Although her appearance suggests a poised but slightly helpless Southern lady, her rich contralto, which she accompanies herself on the piano, fills the air with an intoxicating music which she calls "makin' glory." Nearly all of her songs are her own original compositions, but every one has the authentic ring of the Negro's own pulsing musical dialect. She sings of love and Jesus, the cotton fields and the thousand other details of a Southern Negro's life.

When she is not on tour Lucile Turner lives on their 600-acre farm at the foot of the Blue Ridge Mountains near Lynchburg. The Turners have three children—an Army captain, a son in the Marines and a daughter recently graduated from Stephens College in Columbia, Mo. She has written two new war songs—"We Are Ready," and "When I Heard the News."

Recent concert dates have taken her to many United States Army camps, to Manhattan's Rainbow Room and Town Hall, to the Academy of Music in Brooklyn and to the British Embassy, where she sang for Lord Halifax and his wounded son, Lieut. Richard Wood.

Mrs. Mark Eldredge, wife of the power consultant on the War Production Board in Washington, is well known for her talks on India and the Near East. She has made four separate trips to India, and has lived there for ten years with her engineering husband.

A graduate and master of arts of Colorado College, and with post-graduate work at the University of Nebraska and Columbia University, Mrs. Eldredge was well prepared for her deep and studious interest in the India of today.

Boys Club Aides Plan Luncheon

The luncheon meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club will be held at the Shoreham Hotel, Monday at 12:30 p. m. Hostesses will be Mmes. C. Basseches, G. R. DeBruler, C. Kaywood, H. O. House and L. Gordon.

Members will discuss the matter of receiving approval from the camp committee of the board of directors of the men's club to donate a boathouse for the Boys Club summer camp at Scotland, Md.

The members already have donated a pool table to the new Boys Club No. 12, Lincoln rd. and Randolph pl. ne.

Officers of the Women's Auxiliary are Mrs. J. L. Arnold, president; Mrs. Evan A. Sholl, vice president; Mrs. Charles Basseches, secretary, and Mrs. H. O. House, treasurer.

Alumni Club Dinner Planned

The Northwestern University Alumni Club of Washington will hold a dinner Wednesday evening at the Lee-Sheraton Hotel, in honor of Dr. Walter Dill Scott, president emeritus of the university.

Dr. Scott had a long and brilliant record of more than 20 years as the active head of Northwestern University. During that time, the university went through a period of great expansion, including the development of the downtown campus in Chicago, housing the schools of medicine, dentistry, journalism commerce and law.

Women's League to Hear Jenkins

Representative Thomas A. Jenkins of Ohio will speak on "Food Subsidies" at the meeting of the League of Republican Women at their clubhouse Monday, at 2 p. m.

Representative Jenkins is Chairman of the Republican Food Study Committee of the House and has introduced a bill, calling for the consolidation of all agencies handling food, now pending before the Banking and Currency Committee.

He is also chairman of a delegation of 20 Ohio Republicans in the House which recently adopted a resolution calling for "honest and sensible domestic policies" and pledging active support of Governor Bricker of Ohio for the presidential nomination.

Mrs. Willian N. Doak, program chairman, will introduce the speaker and a board meeting will be held at 11 a. m. preceding the afternoon session.

Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, the league's president, will preside at both meetings.

Taussigs to Make Home in Newport, R. I.

Now on a brief wedding trip are Lieut. Joseph Knefler Taussig, jr., and his bride, the former Miss Betty Bostwick Carney, whose marriage took place here on Thursday.

One of the most important weddings of the season, the event was solemnized at St. Margaret's Church at 5 p. m. The Rev. Armand Eyler, assisted by Chaplain William Thomas, officiated. Mrs. Taussig is the daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Robert B. Carney of Alexandria, and the bridegroom is the son of Vice Admiral and Mrs. Taussig of Washington.

Capt. Victor Cameron Barringer gave the bride in marriage. She was attired in ivory satin, styled with a full skirt and circular train. The yoke was of tulle, trimmed with lace applique, and the lace veil was caught with a small cap. Her bouquet was of white orchids and bouvardia. Mrs. Efrem Zimbalist, jr., the matron of honor, was costumed in white lace and carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses.

Vice Admiral Taussig served as best man for his son and ushers included Ensign George Hinckley, Lieut. Victor Delano and Maj. Thomas Meckling. Following the ceremony there was a small reception for members of the two families and close friends at the Sulgrave Club. For her traveling costume the bride had selected a Sandringham blue suit with hat to match, and brown accessories. She and her husband will make their home in Newport, R. I., where the bridegroom is stationed.

The bride attended Gunston Hall School and Lieutenant Taussig was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1941. He is a grandson of the late Rear Admiral Edward D. Taussig.

Shepherd—Haislip

Now on their wedding trip before returning to Lorton, Va., to make their home, are Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Shepherd, both of Lorton, Va.

Mrs. Shepherd, the former Miss Margaret L. Haislip, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Keith Haislip. Mr. Shepherd is the son of Mrs. Aubrey Shepherd and the late Mr. Shepherd.

The ceremony took place at the Woodlawn Baptist Church, Woodlawn, Va., on November 27.

Attired in a street length dress of aqua gabardine with brown accessories, the bride was given in marriage by her father. Selected as attendant was Miss Elizabeth Haislip, sister of the bride.

The best man was Mr. Calvin O. O'Rourke, a cousin of the bridegroom. A reception was held immediately following the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents.

Rich—Kirk

Off to a flying start are bride and bridegroom, Mr. and Mrs. James Stuart Rich, who boarded a plane after their wedding November 27 and flew away on a brief honeymoon.

Mrs. Rich, the former Miss Helen G. Kirks, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Barckley Kirks of Washington. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Henry Rich of Cortland, N. Y.

The ceremony took place at the Petworth Baptist Church with Rev. Jame P. Rodgers officiating. The birde was attired in an ivory satin gown and carried an orchid set in white roses.

The maid of honor, Miss Cora Lee McWhirt, wore a pastel blue gown and carried large yellow chrysanthemums. Other attendants were Miss Annella Robinson, Miss Mariose Manning and Mrs. Shirley Robertson.

Selected as best man was Mr. Robert J. Tomlinson of Cortland, N. Y.

Mrs. Rich is a graduate of George Washington University. Mr. Rich attended Rochester Mechanics Institute, Syracuse University and the New York State University.

Mrs. J. A. Dougherty To Spend Winter in N. Y.

Mrs. John Allan Dougherty has leased her apartment at 1868 Columbia rd. and will leave next week for New York where she will spend the winter at the Savoy-Plaza. She is looking forward to the music season in New York and will see the best plays. In the spring she will go to Westport, Conn., to open her home there.

* * * *

Mrs. Isabelle Boone has recently returned from a trip to her former home in Iowa. En route she visited briefly with her nephew, Corpl. Howell Boone, in Chicago. Mrs. Boone will be "at home" informally at her studio apartment in Kew Gardens, Georgetown, tomorrow evening, from 5:30 to 7:30 o'clock. Miss Isabelle Morrison will assist. No cards have been issued.

ON WITH THE DANCE

Washington Frolics in Full Stride; It's a Wartime Tradition of Ours

(Perhaps it's merely a matter of "escape" from gloomy realities . . . an expression of the unrest that unleashes itself in the pervading tenseness of a world in conflict—but anyway, it's a matter of history that in time of war a nation dances. And this war, America is dancing as it never danced before. This is the first in a series of three articles on whys and wherefores of the "light fantastic" in this and other eras.)

By Jean Craighead

Washington is dancing today with a fervor, and an abandon, rarely noted before in the history of America.

Dance steps created through war and peace move across the modern ballroom floor to a medley of tunes and musical innovations, and every dance floor through an evening's program presents a kaleidoscope of dance trends for each generation. With rotations and hot breaks the younger set expresses the boom trends, the depression and the safety-pin economy that burst around their lives.

Older generations still dance their velvety two-steps and Rye Waltzes that were a reflection of a prosperous expanding age of the frontiers.

The generation that fought the last war can hardly resist the temptation to do a break with a Charleston kick, somewhat mutilated by the glassy smoothness of the "Boogie Woogie Bugle Boy" as accompaniment.

American dance got its big-league start in the days of the Grand March and the March Quadrille that floated in on an era of lush economic expansion and opportunity.

This peaceful era, on the brink of the cataclysmic twentieth century, reflected much of the old court life when dancing was a formal function and quadrilles were practiced and reviewed days before the occasion. The ball itself was almost a display of talent and perfection.

The dances of the "people" at this time were the square dances and folk dances brought into the United States by the many immigrant groups. Polkas, Virginia Reels, the Circle Schottische, cowboy dances, Turkey in the Straw, and the many plain-language dances belonged to the people and were usually held Saturday night on Abe's barn floor or expansive living room.

Then, overnight—out of the shriek of the locomotive, and the percussion of the factory, the plodding of the Manhattan Ferry and the shimmering rise of skyscrapers—came jazz. The punctual downbeat caught, and jazz raided the dance halls and upper class night clubs.

Here, in the great metropolitan areas that centered around industry and business, was a new source of inspiration. The waltz would no longer synchronize with the beat of the factory turning out engines and steel girders. In such a scene jazz, the fox trot, and the cakewalk were not revolutionary—they fitted.

The early jazz dance, as the early music, was extreme and untamed. Musicians followed no score, had no arrangements. They just picked up the new feeling and went to town. So did the dancers. The rhythm was new. A blunt intrepretation of what they heard was as much as they could give. But they gave that. Night clubs and taxi dance halls screamed with high jazz and bounced with the awkward stride of the sensational Cakewalk and Turkey Trot.

Paul Whiteman took this spurting nucleus and rescued it. The country was ripe to receive this ambassador of jazz who was to bring the new music out of the jungles and dives, arrange it, work with it and present it in capsule form. He handed over "Avalon," "Japanese Sandman," "Three O'Clock in the Morning" and "Dardanella."

This started an avalanche of dance band arrangements and jazz hits that swept not only the United States but England, France and Germany.

The Negro, with his inherent sense of rhythm, contributed richly to the rise of jazz. Dixieland jazz bands popped out of the South in a fever. The music was beginning to have a form and rules of its own. The dancer reacted to this stability and borrowed from folk dances and old tribal dances to enlarge their flitting vocabulary.

As soon as the downbeat and swift rhythm was set, the dancers could enlarge on the basic form and improvise new tempos against old ones.

About this time, the first World War cast its shadow . . . and dancing began to react to the world-wide unrest.

(The second article in this series will appear next Saturday.)

Gen. Gullion Gives Bride In Marriage

With Maj. Gen. Allen W. Gullion, Provost Marshal General, giving the bride in marriage, Miss Phylena Peyton and Sergt. Lloyd H. Haynes were married yesterday.

The ceremony took place in Fort Myer Chapel at 5:30 p. m. Capt. Thomas W. B. Magnan of Fort Myer officiated.

Miss Odine Peyton, sister of the bride, was the only attendant, and Lieut. W. J. Boland of the Corps of Military Police was best man.

The bride, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Peyton of Bentona, Miss., was gowned in white satin, styled on princess lines with a sweetheart neckline. Her finger-tip veil was fashioned in a tiara, and she carried a shower of white roses and valley lilies.

Wife of "Gallant Eagle" Hostess at Small Tea

Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, entertained at a small tea yesterday afternoon at the Wardman Park, honoring Senora de Samoza, wife of the President of Nicaragua.

Senora de Samoza is visiting her son-in-law and daughter, the Nicaraguan Ambassador and Senora Sevilla de Sacasa.

A Big Party It Was, and a Gay Party, Too; Men Who Paid a Price Are Not Forgotten

By Martha Rhyne

A drama that could only happen here—with a grand old lady of society as hostess and more than a hundred wounded servicemen, music, cheers, and many unshed tears, the principals in the cast.

Entrusted to the care of the Home Hospitality Committee Thursday evening were the enlisted men who came in ambulances, some in wheel chairs, some on stretchers, most of them badly crippled, to enjoy what Mrs. Edward Stotesbury, long a leader in the Old Guard, called "the best party she had ever given." It isn't necessary to add that she has given thousands.

In the drawing room of the stately old mansion, there were only comfortable chairs for the boys; the music room had been emptied of furnishings, too. Those in wheel chairs were invited to wheel themselves over the entire first floor, basking in the rich beauty that the paintings and furnishings present.

WAVES, WACS, SPARS, Red Cross workers, Government girls, nurses and interns from Walter Reed and the Naval Hospital mingled with the boys. Generals' wives mingled with the boys, the wife of an admiral was on hand to do her bit, Admiral and Mrs. Clark Woodward stood by. Maryland boys were elated to meet their own Senator Radcliffe, who was all over the place with boys from all States.

If there's anything a fellow likes with a vengeance it's his favorite song. The Air Forces Band string trio was out in the audience doing requests "off the cuff." Corpl. Glen Darwin, who sings like Tibbett, was accompanied by Sergt. Virgil Fox, who does ethereal things with piano music. Negro spirituals, folk songs, romantic medleys and "Pistol Packin' Mama" resounded.

The Navy Band, in its premier performance in a private home, played tantalizing dance music. The leader challenged the boys, some of whom hadn't walked without crutches for months.

"Hey, you guys. We came out here to give you dance music and all you do is sit!" Onto their feet they struggled, pathetically, aided by uniformed women and other hostesses. They weren't too graceful at first, but their spirits lifted and they laughed. It was good medicine.

The artist Pavloff painted portraits of several boys, holders of lucky tickets. An Italian restaurateur served spaghetti—like a true artist, he prepared and served it on the spot.

Three tables held mounds of food—a turkey and ham given by a wealthy newspaperwoman; turkeys from a metropolitan hotel and from the wife of the Philippines President. A newspaperman sent cigarettes. Coffee, cookies and a raft of other food were given from generous donors, most of whom remained anonymous. Mrs. Lionel Atwill, daughter of Mrs. Stotesbury, heads the committee which entertains these men and she's aided by Princess Pignatelli, Baroness Stackelberg, Mrs. Edward Treglown, Mrs. Walter Amesbury, jr., Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, Mrs. Randall Hagner, Mrs. Drew Pearson, Mrs. Conger Pratt, Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer, Mrs. Claude Woodward, Mrs. Thomas Cowell and many others.

At 10 o'clock the band played "Home Sweet Home." Reluctantly the boys left. But not before Mrs. Stotesbury, touched by it all, bent to kiss one of the more critically wounded good-night. She had to do it over, as many times as there were boys, for they all demanded a kiss with the explanation, "This is worth being wounded, Mrs. Stotesbury."

Tale of Fighting Dutchmen Told In Coblentz Book

The story of another period when plain everyday Dutchmen were determined to throw off a tyrannical yoke is told by Catherine Cate Coblentz, Washington poet and author, in her latest book, "The Beggars' Penny."

Dealing with a period of great democratic tolerance in the university city of Leyden, Holland, in the sixteenth century, the tale is told of an era of great social change. Leyden at that time was a city of refugees, filled with freedom-minded peoples fleeing before war and slavery. It was to this city that the Pilgrims came before sailing to America and it was there that they learned the principles of self-government that they later applied in New England.

Writing again of children, as she has so often done in the past, Mrs. Coblentz uses three youthful subjects, representative of three social and religious groups.

Here in Washington since the last World War, Mrs. Coblentz is the wife of Dr. William Weber Coblentz of the National Bureau of Standards. She and her husband visited Leyden in 1936.

3 Pastors, 1 Church to Mark Anniversaries Tomorrow

Several important congregational and pastoral anniversaries will be celebrated tomorrow with special services in the Washington areas.

RODGERS

The Rev. James P. Rodgers will mark the third anniversary of his pastorate of Petworth Baptist Church; the Rev. Ralph W. Loew will celebrate his sixth anniversary as assistant pastor of Reformation Lutheran Church; Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden, pastor of First Baptist Church, will commemorate his seventh anniversary here, and Chevy Chase Baptist Church, led by the Rev. Edward O. Clark, will commemorate its twentieth anniversary.

Mr. Rodgers will speak at 11 a. m. on "This Pastor's Confession of Faith," and at 8 p. m. on "Does Jesus Care?" During his ministry at Petworth Church, the membership has increased from 707 to 1175; a unified budget system has been installed, with the church reported as having received receipts of more than $90,000 in three years. More than $12,500 has gone into world-wide missionary work. Mr. Rodgers was chairman of the recent city-wide Baptist evangelistic drive and is a member of the executive committee of the D. C. Convention of Baptists Churches.

LOEW

Mr. Loew will mark his anniversary at Reformation Church by speaking at 8:30 a. m. on "The Yearning for a Voice," and at 11 a. m. on "The End of the Beginning." Holy Communion will be celebrated at 8:30 a. m. and at the conclusion of the service at 8 p. m. Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor, will preach at the evening service on "The Prayer Closet."

PRUDEN

Since Dr. Pruden came to First Church in 1936, more than 2000 members have affiliated with the congregation, the membership of which has increased from 775 to 1850, and the annual income from $17,000 to $70,000.

Dr. Pruden, new president of the D. C. Convention of Baptist Churches, and former president of the Washington Federation of Churches, will speak at 9:45 and 11 a. m. on "Shaping Our Future." Ruth Reumann Hall will sing "The Lord's Prayer," by Malotte, which she sings on the pastor's anniversaries. The Christian Mission on World Order's message for Christian youth will be stressed at 8 p. m., when the speaker will be the Rev. Gordon Torgerson, associate minister of the First Baptist Church, Dayton, Ohio.

As the Chevy Chase Church commemorates two decades of service to the community, the Rev. Edward O. Clark will preach at 11 a. m. on "Our Lord and His Church," and will celebrate communion. The congregation was organized December 6, 1923, with 36 charter members. Its membership is now well over 500, and a new colonial-styled edifice will be erected after the war. An historical exhibit and a model of the proposed new church will be displayed at the service.

CLARK

A formal anniversary service and reception will take place Wednesday at 8 p. m., when Representative Joseph R. Bryson of South Carolina, prominent Baptist layman, will speak. Mr. Clark, who was called to the Chevy Chase Church shortly after its inception, has not only been prominent in his own community but also in citywide Baptist and interdenominational and interfaith movements.

Schedule Announced For Triduum of Prayer

A Triduum of prayer to the Immaculate Conception will be held Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at 7:45 p. m. at Immaculate Conception Church, 8th and N sts. nw., of which Father John K. Cartwright is pastor. Wednesday will be the Feast of the Immaculate Conception and a holy day of obligation. Masses on that day will be at 6:45, 7:30 and 9 a. m. and 12:15 p. m.

St. Olaf's Head Speaks Tomorrow

Dr. Clemens Granskou, president of St. Olaf's College, Northfield, Minnesota, will speak tomorrow at 11 a. m. at Grace Lutheran Church and at 7:30 p. m. at Luther Place Memorial Church.

Church Groups Will Compete In Bible Quiz

Featured on the 140th session of radio's original Bible Quiz will be a contest for the highest score in Bible knowledge between selected Bible students from Wallace Memorial United Presbyterian Church and the Clarendon First Baptist Church, Arlington, Va., tonight at 7 o'clock over Station WWDC.

Representing the Presbyterians will be Mrs. C. P. Weber, Miss Lucile Broadus, Dr. Lawrence Klare, and Mrs. W. S. Hammers. The Baptists will include Mrs. Martha Oldham, James Fox, Mrs. Henry Tinsman and Thos. H. Christie. Evangelist Dale Crowley will be master of ceremonies.

Mr. Crowley conducts two daily Gospel programs over Station WWDC: a devotional service at 6:45 o'clock a. m., and an inspirational service at 12:35 o'clock noon.

'Always a Christmas' to Be Theme of Advent Activities

"There'll always be a Christmas."

That will be the dominating note in church-sponsored activities during this Advent season in a world at war, as congregations sponsor programs of a spiritual and social nature.

"The Doctor of Lonesome Folk," a drama based on the Dickens era, will be presented Wednesday and Thursday at 8:30 p. m. in Covenant Chapel, 18th and N sts. nw., by the Covenant Fellowship. The proceeds will be used for missionary work. Louise Voorhis Armstrong authored the play, which deals with a jolly doctor who watches townsfolk so engrossed in their own troubles that they are blind to the awareness of Christmastide.

The Women's Association of Universalist National Memorial Church will sponsor a Christmas dinner Tuesday from 5:30 to 7 p. m. Mrs. Charles W. Cartwright and Mrs. Elon G. Salisbury are co-chairmen.

The St. Nicholas Sisterhood and the Nation's Capital Russian Club will hold their annual Yule bazaar December 10 and 11 at 1768 Church st. nw., from 2 to 9 p. m., for the benefit of the St. Nicholas Church building fund. Russian pastries, embroideries and Christmas cards will be for sale.

A feature of the D. C. Christian Endeavor Union meeting Monday at 8 p. m. at Sherwood Presbyterian Church, 22d and Rhode Island ave. nw., will be the presentation of a play, "The Place Where the Young Child Lay," by the Endeavorers of Memorial United Presbyterian Church.

A program of French Christmas music will be presented tomorrow at 5 p. m. at All Soul's Unitarian Church by Lewis Corning Atwater, organist, assisted by Mrs. Henry T. Parrett, soprano.

A Christmas cantata, "The Christ Child," by Hawley, will be presented December 12 at 5 p. m. at Shiloh Baptist Church, 9th and P sts. nw. Participating singers will be from the choirs of Asbury Methodist and First, Israel, Mount Carmel, Nineteenth Street, and Shiloh Baptist Churches. Miss Wilhelmina B. Patterson, music specialist of the D. C. Recreational Department, is guest director; James B. Jones, jr., organist, and Olive L. English, sponsor.

Glee Club to Present Yule Music Tomorrow

The Washington-Lee Girls Glee Club will present a program of Christmas music at a vesper service at Community Methodist Church, Key blvd. and N. Bryan st., tomorrow at 5 p. m.

The program will be presented under the direction of Miss Florence Booker, conductor, with Mrs. R. M. Andrews at the organ. The Rev. Walter M. Lockett, jr., is pastor of the church.

500 Boys, Girls To Sing Carols At Cathedral

Five hundred choristers from the National Cathedral School for Girls and St. Alban's School for Boys will sing Christmas carols at the Washington Cathedral Tuesday from 3:45 to 5 p. m. This program will be broadcast overseas by the National Broadcasting Co.

Many of the familiar carols will be sung, and some of the more unusual and seldom-heard ones will be presented. The boys and girls will march in from different parts of the Cathedral and their voices will be massed for special effect.

Also participating in the program will be Canon Chancellor Charles W. F. Smith, Canon Albert H. Lucas, headmaster of St. Alban's; Canon James Henderson, Acting Canon Precentor W. Curtis Draper, jr., and the Rev. Mr. Anderson. The program has been arranged by Dexter Davison of the St. Alban's faculty, who has trained the boys. The girls were trained by Justin Williams.

Radio Pastor to Speak

Dr. William Ward Ayer, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, New York City, and widely-known radio preacher, will address a youth rally December 10 at 8 p. m. at Metropolitan Baptist Church, 6th and A sts. n.e.

Redemption

Ex-Criminal Will Relate Life Story

Emmet ("Texas Slim") Vestal, who was converted to Christianity after a notorious life of crime, will speak tomorrow at the National Tabernacle, 6440 Piney Branch road nw.

He will speak at 11 a. m. on "The Prayers of My Dying Mother and Childhood Tragedies"; at 3 p. m. on "Rounding Out the Last Curve," and at 8 p. m. on "My Last Bank Hold-up—My Daring Escape and Mixing Cotton With Blood."

"Texas Slim" Vestal, who has told his amazing life story to audiences all over America, once faced the gallows and the electric chair in Texas. He claims to have been "miraculously saved by the grace of God in answer to the prayers of my mother."

Military Mass Set Tomorrow

Officers and members of George E. Killeen Post, No. 25, of the American Legion will attend a solemn military mass in Holy Trinity Church, Georgetown, tomorrow at 10 a. m.

Arrangements for the mass were made by Killeen Post to commemorate servicemen and women who have given their lives in this war. A sermon will be preached by the Rev. Hugh McCarran, S. J., of Holy Trinity.

Departmental officers and Legionnaires generally have been invited to attend the mass. The Legion guard of honor and a guard from Fort Myer, Va., will turn out for the ceremony.

Madonnas' Art, Music Scheduled

Dr. Howard Thurman, dean of Andrew Rankin Memorial Chapel, Howard University, announces the annual Christmas twilight hour tomorrow at 8 p. m.

Due to war conditions it is impossible to have the Living Madonnas as in previous years. Instead of this service there will be a pictorial presentation of Madonnas from famous paintings, accompanied by appropriate music, vocal and instrumental. The attention of the public is called to the fact that there will be only one presentation, and that at 8 o'clock.

Traveler to Address Meeting of Baha'i

David Rouse Perry, Baha'i lecturer and world traveler, will speak tomorrow at 8:15 p. m. at the Baha'i Hall, 1308 I st. nw., on "Why I Am a Baha'i." The Baha'i Sunday School will be led at 9:30 a. m. by Mrs. John B. DeMille and John Verhoeven. The Baha'i study class will meet at 11 a. m. under Miss Leone Barnitz's leadership.

Bibles Rationed

And now they are rationing Bibles. No, not formally like butter and shoes, but simply because shortages of paper and binding materials have compelled it at the very time when everybody wants a Bible.

The Bible is a world commodity that in many lands has always been rationed. The inadequate supply has been due to the fact that the great Christian nations, and notably our own, have not made it possible to furnish enough books.

Most of the people of the world live on an income level that makes even the purchase of a Gospel portion of Scripture impossible. If the world is to have the Bible, America and other Bible-producing nations must provide the copies below cost. The machinery for doing this in the United States is all set up. It has been running for 127 years. It is the American Bible Society, agent of the church bodies of America, a nonprofit institution chartered to translate, produce and distribute the Word of God without note or comment for any man on earth who wants a copy and cannot afford one.

December 12 is Universal Bible Sunday, sponsored each year by the American Bible Society to remind the people of this Nation of their responsibility to see that an adequate supply of Bibles is maintained for those who want them. Chaplains are calling for pocket Testaments for soldiers and sailors. These requests have asked for an average of 20,000 a week for more than a year at the Bible House, home of the American Bible Society in New York City. Prisoners of war, millions of them, in Germany, Poland and elsewhere are asking for Bibles.

The Bible Society has already supplied over half a million in 34 different languages for these unfortunates. The civilian populations of Europe, where Bibles have always been so accessible, are bereft of them now and are crying out for copies. The Bible Society's office in Geneva, Switzerland, is doing all we make possible for them to do. China, under its great Christian President, has fallen in love with the Bible. Her people are fast becoming literate. But they are too poor to pay even the cost of a Bible. They look to America for their supply.

Yes, Bibles are rationed, but chiefly because America, as she basks in the glorious liberties that have come from the teachings of the Bible, has not been willing to share the book with her neighbors. Here is a rationing that is not necessary. A little thoughtfulness and generosity will correct it.

Nationally Known Attorney to Speak At Radio Rally

James E. Bennett of New York City, nationally known as the attorney for the defense in the recent lawsuit against the Bible in a New York courtroom, will be the speaker at the thirty-third Saturday night Christian Youth and Servicemen's Radio Rally at Almas Temple, 1315 K st. nw. A broadcast over WOL will take place at 8 o'clock.

BENNETT

Bennett has written an account of the lawsuit, entitled "The Bible Defeats Atheism," and he represented in the trial Dr. Harry Rimmer, president of the Research Science Bureau, and the one who had offered $1000 to anyone who could prove a scientific error in the Bible.

Many service men and women are given free suppers each Saturday night and are served by the Christian Business Girls' Association. Glenn Wagner, president of the Washington Bible Institute, will direct the program again at the Temple. Homer E. Phillips, bandmaster of the United States Navy, is in charge of the music for the night.

Christian Science Topic Announced

The Christian Science lesson-sermon for tomorrow is "God the Only Cause and Creator." Services are held at 11 a. m. and repeated at 8 p. m., except Third Church, at 5 p. m. All are invited to attend the services and the Wednesday evening meeting at 8 o'clock.

Among the citations comprising the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "But as it is written, eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him." (I Cor. 2:9)

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy:

"THE CHURCH'S ONE FOUNDATION"
SAMUEL J. STONE

The Church's one foundation
Is Jesus Christ our Lord;
She is His new creation
By water and the Word;
From heav'n He came and sought her
To be His holy bride;
With His own blood He bought her,
And for her life He died.

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS
This favorite hymn of dedication reiterates the central truths of the Christian Faith found in the Apostles' Creed. It is a fitting choice when a cornerstone is to be laid, for it suggests the words of Jesus, "The stone which the builders rejected, the same is to become the head of the corner."

Disciples of Christ Churches Holding Centennial Services

The 100th anniversary celebration of the beginning of the Disciples of Christ movement in the Nation's Capital began last night with a colorful banquet in the social hall of National City Christian Church, Thomas Circle.

Meanwhile, the centennial will be marked with services in individual Disciples' churches tomorrow and also with a city-wide Disciples service at 8 p. m. at Ninth Street Christian Church, 9th and D sts. ne.

Dr. Alonzo Willard Fortune, minister of historical Central Christian Church of Lexington, Ky., will address the city-wide rally on "Perpetuating the Vision of the Fathers." The combined choirs of the 20 participating churches will sing the anthem "Gloria," by Mozart, and Mrs. C. G. Randell of the National City Christian Church will offer a violin solo, "The Adagio and Moderato from Sonata," by Purcell.

The Rev. Carroll C. Roberts, host pastor and president of the Christian Church Council here, will preside. Others on the program will be the Revs. Ralph W. Frame, First Christian Church, Alexandria, Va.; J. Warrent Hastings, National City Church; Leslie L. Bowers, Fifteenth Street Church, and J. Virgil Lilly, Rockville Church.

A number of nationally known Disciples leaders will take part in the centennial service at National City Christian Church tomorrow at 11 a. m. It is the "mother" church of the faith here.

Among the participants will be Dr. Fred Smith, executive secretary of the Disciples pension fund; Dr. Eric Carlson, executive secretary, Disciples benevolent fund; Dr. William Pearcy, treasurer of the Disciples church extension board; Dr. Raphael Harwood Miller, editor of the Christian Evangelist and former National City pastor, and Oreon E. Scott, president of the national board of trustees. Dr. J. Warren Hastings, pastor, will speak on "We Shall Build On." John Rogers, prominent attorney of Tulsa, Okla., will address men and women of the congregation before the service.

Lack of Practice Makes Imperfect!

Capt. Stewart 'Blows His Lines'; New Picture House for Southeast

IT IS NOT SURPRISING that Jimmy Stewart should have become a little rusty in his motion picture technique.

If that sounds a shade cryptic it must be because you have not seen the wire reports from England, where Jimmy recently arrived as commander of a squadron of four-motored Liberator bombers and immediately was called upon to do a stint for the newsreels. That was okay with Jimmy, until it came time to say a few words for the sound track. Then, Jimmy, who delivered one of the longest sustained speeches on record in "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," up and blew his lines and the whole thing had to be done over again!

JAMES STEWART

Such complete detachment from the concerns that made him one of the screen's foremost stars is understandable in the man whose intensive training and devotion to duty has elevated him from buck private to captain in the Air Forces.

Capt. James Stewart piloted his own bomber, the Tenovus, across the Atlantic and after a little more combat training on the other side will enter actively in the air attack on Mr. Schickelgruber's roofless Fortress Europe. His part probably will be to lead every fifth mission in which his command participates.

That ship of his was called the Tenovus, because it was manned by a crew of 10—the Ten-of-us if you have to have it spelled out.

Captain Stewart is not the only former Hollywood star who has got himself into the thick of things. Word is to hand that Marine Capt. Charles L. Hayward, known to film fans as Louis Hayward, husband of Ida Lupino, and Navy Ensign Eddie Albert were in the active fighting at Tarawa—bloodiest battle of the war in the Pacific. Captain Hayward, in charge of second Marine division official movies and still photographs, went ashore the first day and photographed scenes under fire for three days. One of his photographers was killed and he got a deep bullet dent in his steel helmet. Albert, a bewildered and timid hero before the cameras, was a salvage officer in a Navy shore party. For several hours on a bullet-swept beach when the fighting was at its most intense, he carried wounded to evacuation boats and first-aid stations.

It is an unpleasant chore to report that the illness that threatened to keep Julie Haydon out of the first night's performance of "The Patriots," at the National last Monday night, finally had its own way Thursday night. Miss Haydon's condition was such that she was unable to go on and the role of Patsy Jefferson was taken for the first time by her understudy, Marie Dow, regularly cast in the prologue part of Martha, Jefferson's beloved wife. All of Washington is pulling fervently for Miss Haydon's speedy and complete recovery. It looks upon her almost as a native daughter, what with her appearances at Catholic University and all.

Two Old Favorites Return

When "In Old Oklahoma" opens on the Earle screen next Friday, two distinguished actresses will be returning from partial retirement for the first time in months. Marjorie Rambeau will be remembered by the Capital's old guard from the remote days at the Columbia Theater, when she and her then-husband, the late Willard Mack, actor-playwright, were wont to try out his new plays before taking them on to Broadway. Mack, in an earlier incarnation, had been a student at Georgetown. Cecil Cunningham, also in the cast, formerly was a brilliant soprano; latterly a distinguished character actress. Her husband was the late Jean Havez, the unseen power behind the comedy in Lew Dockstader's minstrel shows and author of that once popular roundelay, "Everybody Works But Father."

Dunninger's weekly broadcast, theater and radio fans will be glad to learn, will be conducted from the stage of Loew's Capitol Theater tomorrow night from 10:30 to 11 o'clock. Dunninger's appearance on the stage will begin at 10 p. m. There is more to this than meets the eye. Instead of going on the air tomorrow night, the radio program will be recorded and not be transmitted coast-to-coast over WMAL until next day. Members of the Capitol audience participating will be able to hear exactly how they sound to the listener-inners by tuning in WMAL at the proper hour on Monday. Mr. Dunninger doesn't know, and neither do I, whether this has ever been done before.

Aware that under present overcrowded conditions Washington is vastly underseated, the Fairlawn Amusement Co. is taking advantage of the situation by putting up a new neighborhood picture house. It will be located at 1415 Good Hope rd. se., and be erected at an approximate cost of $70,000. It has been designed by John Eberson, famous theater architect, and will be built by the Kemp Mohler Construction Co., unless I have my data on crooked.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

ONE RESULT of the Big Four conferences may be a greater participation of small nations in the United Nations Councils. President Roosevelt is known to advocate this. Also, he would like to shift the council meetings from London to Washington.

The idea of greater recognition of little nations is based not only on fairness and equity, but also on the fact that Latin-American nations are getting increasingly hurt, if not provoked, over being left out of important United Nations parleys.

A large number of small nations are now belligerents, having declared war against Germany, while at least two of them —Brazil and Mexico — are strategically vital to the war. Without Brazilian bases, for instance, it would be almost impossible to ferry planes back and forth to North Africa with such rapid efficiency.

It was originally planned, in advance conversations (prior to Moscow) between former Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles and Roosevelt, also between the President and Churchill, to include smaller members of the United Nations in an overall organization. A smaller council of Great Britain, Russia, the United States and China was to guide the over-all organization, but the smaller nations were to be a very definite and important part of the set-up.

Also, it was planned to have United Nations headquarters in the fresher, more idealistic atmosphere of Washington, not in the Old World atmosphere of London.

Secretary Hull was not quite able to put these two ideas across at Moscow, but the President's persuasive influence on Stalin and Churchill may do so. He considers both items important to getting a permanent peace organization off with the right foot forward.

Tax Bill Hearings

WHAT SHOULD BE one of the most important tax bills in recent history is up for haphazard, desultory Congressional discussion. It will decide what proportion of the war bill is to be passed on to the boys now fighting overseas and to their children. Also, it will help decide whether there will be inflation.

But despite its importance, the tax bill is being handled with brazen left-handed congressional carelessness, as if most solons on Capitol Hill were completely tax-unconscious.

On the day after Secretary Morgenthau presented his case at the opening of the tax hearings before the Senate Finance Committee, only two members of the committee—faithful, hard-working Chairman George of Georgia and conscientious Senator Walsh of Massachusetts—attended the entire day's hearing. A few Republicans drifted in during the morning—among them Michigan's Vandenberg. But in the afternoon, the two Democrats held the hearing alone.

In the House of Representatives, the tax sessions were a bit livelier, though not much. The House passed the tax bill after one day of floor consideration and with very little debate. The attitude of most Congressmen was that there had to be a tax bill—but make it as low as possible.

The House Ways and Means Committee gave more time and study to taxes, but only a handful of members really worked at the job. They included North Carolina's Chairman Doughton, who really knows taxes; Tennessee's Jere Cooper, one of the best men on the committee; Oklahoma's Disney, also a real expert; Virginia's Robertson, Wisconsin's Wasielewski and Kansas' Carlson.

However, the Treasury, which believes in higher taxes, was barred from many sessions. Congressmen wanted no interference with their conspiracy to push through the most painless tax bill in wartime history.

Congressional Nepotism

SEVERAL MONTHS ago this column revealed that Bill Chenoweth had been on the payroll of his father, Representative J. Edgar Chenoweth of Colorado, for almost two years while attending college in Colorado and Washington.

Today young Chenoweth is no longer being paid for not working in his father's office. However, Chenoweth, Senior, didn't drop a stitch in his nepotism knitting. Hardly had his son left the payroll when a daughter, Wanda, was inserted in the job at $1,800 a year, a $600 raise.

Congressman Chenoweth's case is only one out of many on Capitol Hill. Here's the roll-call on other House members who have relatives billeted on the taxpayers:

Representative Paul Stewart of Oklahoma—A step-daughter, Mary Ellen Smith, gets $3,200 a year, practically half of his yearly clerk-hire allowance.

Representative Albert E. Carter of California—His wife, Mary Lee Carter, is paid $2,300 a year for working in his office occasionally.

Representative Harry Dworshak of Idaho—Mrs. Dworshak is a $1,200-a-year assistant.

Representative John S. Gibson of Georgia—Mrs. Gibson, listed on his payroll as "Jimmie" Gibson, is paid $3,000 a year by the taxpayers.

Note: With prices high and not even a Little Steel formula salary increase for Congressmen, many an A-1 legislator is finding it hard to educate his children and live on his congressional salary. Washington is one of the most expensive cities in the country in which to live.

Soldiers' Overseas Vote

ADMINISTRATION LEADERS used every parliamentary trick in the book to defeat the Bridges amendment to the soldiers' vote bill—an amendment which gives the Democratic and Republican National Committees a voice in the selection of the ballot commissioners. Administrationites argued that the amendment was a "reflection" on the President.

The day before the amendment was adopted by the Senate, its author, Republican Senator Bridges of New Hampshire, tried to railroad a vote when there were only eight Democrats on the floor. Senator Scott Lucas of Illinois, coauthor of the vote bill, suggested the absence of a quorum. However, the quorum call failed to bring more than 14 Democrats to the Senate floor. So Lucas played his next card.

He demanded individual "yeas and nays" on the vote. This would give Democratic colleagues who were attending committee meetings time to declare themselves. Senate Republicans, who outnumbered Democrats 2 to 1, opposed the motion, but the presiding officer, Democratic Senator Ernest McFarland of Arizona, nonetheless ordered a "yea and nay" vote.

This strategy enabled many absentee Democrats to get to the floor, and the Bridges amendment was licked by a tie vote, 33 to 33. Afterwards, Senator Arthur Vandenberg, Michigan Republican, who appreciates parliamentary legerdemain even in an opponent, walked over to McFarland and, grinning, said, "Senator, let me congratulate you on your eyesight."

Note: The next day, on a reconsideration, Bridges put over his amendment by a one-vote majority.

Anecdotes and Gossip From Gotham

New York, Dec. 3.—Corey Ford, author of "Short Cut to Tokyo" and now overseas for the Air Forces, was in Iceland when the five touring Senators arrived there . . . Senator Lodge of Massachusetts met one of his constituents and asked him: "How long have you been in Iceland?" . . . The soldier told him: "One year." . . . "Don't worry," Senator Lodge assured him. "We'll get you out of here before long" . . . The soldier turned to Ford and said: "He ought to get us out of here. It was his isolationist grandfather that got us in here."

LEON HENDERSON

While the President has been away, all the messages to Congress bearing his signature really were signed by him on the mentioned dates. Army planes took the documents overseas to the President, who signed them. They then were flown back to Washington . . . In the battle over the custody of Lepke, Paul Lockwood, Dewey's aide, on Monday announced his resentment that Attorney General Biddle had made his reply to the charges while Governor Dewey was away, vacationing in Georgia. When Dewey made his accusation that the President was refusing to deliver Lepke, the President was away—meeting Churchill and Chiang Kai-shek . . . Leon Henderson was offered an extra job for $50,000. If he had accepted it the tax on it would have been $46,500.

Sir Louis Sterling, the famed British industrialist, startles the visiting New Yorkers in London by speaking to them in unmistakable New York accent: "But after all," he reminds them, "I was born in New York" . . . Sir Louis tells of the day he was knighted, when King George received a cable from New York: "Thanks for honoring our envoy to the Court of St. James—(Signed) The Grand Street Boys."

Hal Block, the radio and musical-comedy writer, went to England, Africa and Italy with the USO entertainers, writing gags for them in the war sectors. While he was in London, Block collaborated with Bob Musel in writing a song for the Eighth Air Force show—a song about the round-the-clock bombing . . . One night, Block sang it over BBC:

"Herr Hitler said to Goebbels, 'Do you think it can be spite?
The USA by day, and the RFA by night.'
Herr Himmler said to Goering, "Why don't your Luftwaffe fight
The USA by day, and the RAF by night?
That Churchill's got us on the run, that Roosevelt is a meanie,
They paid us back, 10 bombs to 1 —and gave us Mussolini.'"

Block finished his broadcast, but couldn't leave the BBC Building—because of an air-raid.

Block was in Algiers with Bob Hope. John Steinbeck visited them in their room, and listened to them wondering how both could possibly spend the night in a room so small. "You'll think this is practically a bridal suite, when you compare it to my room," said Steinbeck. They followed him downstairs, to his sleeping quarters—in a cubicle half the size of theirs. "The big guy sleeping over there is Quentin Reynolds," Steinbeck told them. "The other sleeping guy is H. R. Knickerbocker. And that little space between them is where I sleep" . . . Hope noticed a fourth man sleeping in the room, and asked: "Who's he?" . . . "Oh, he's the British Vice-Consul," Steinbeck explained, "This is his room." He invited us to spend the night, two weeks ago."

A Marine Corps officer in San Diego was lecturing a group of enlisted men during the indoctrination course. He told them that he had heard some speak disparagingly about the Army and Navy. "You mustn't talk that way about them," he warned them. "They too have a job to do, and they're doing it. Remember, men, the Army and Navy are our Allies—just as Russia and England are Allies."

Sonny Is Thinner

Sonny Tufts will be 15 pounds lighter in his next Mark Sandrich picture with Paulete Goddard than he was in "So Proudly We Hail." He lost the weight on a personal appearance tour, but the loss is okay since he plays a soldier back from the Solomons.

Four Cover Girls To Stay in Films

Hollywood—Four of Columbia's cover girls—Susann Shaw, Dusty Anderson, Eileen McClory and B. J. Graham—are to have acting careers at the studio.

All four were signed to term contracts as the result of their work in the Technicolor Rita Hayworth starrer, "Cover Girl," for which the studio imported from New York 15 of the Nation's premiere magazine cover models.

Susann Shaw is known as the "Nation's Bride," for her 1643 posings as a bride in the past five years. Dusty Anderson became a cover girl as the result of winning a $400 bank night at Cleveland. Eileen McClory has been a Manhattan air raid warden. B. J. Graham lost her first modeling job for refusing to smile, and small wonder—she was modeling a fur coat in mid-August.

Red Skelton makes it a habit always to wear something maroon, believing it brings him luck.

Directors Get Fat Assignments

Hollywood—When "Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo" goes before the cameras at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer shortly, it will have Mervyn LeRoy in the director's chair. LeRoy, who has just completed "Madame Curie," starring Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon, has started tests for the principal roles in the picture, which is based on Capt. Ted Lawton's spectacular best seller.

"National Velvet," originally on LeRoy's schedule, is to be directed by Clarence Brown, just signed to a new long term contract with M-G-M. With Mickey Rooney starring, the picture will renew the director-actor combination that reached outstanding heights in "The Human Comedy."

"National Velvet" will be filmed in Technicolor, with Elizabeth Taylor, 11-year-old youngster, introduced in "Lassie Come Home," appearing opposite Rooney. Pandro S. Berman is producing the picture, adapted from Enid Bagnold's poignant story of peacetime England.

Knollenberg To Head FEA Lend-Lease

By Walter Wood

Bernhard Knollenberg, once reported ready to resign from the new Foreign Economic Administration, has been made director of of FEA's lend-lease program, it was learned yesterday.

Knollenberg, retaining his title of executive adviser to Administrator Leo T. Crowley, will have a dual role with FEA.

As director of the Requirements and Supply Branch, Knollenberg will be responsible for assembling and screening all foreign requirements, presenting requirements and claimancy before WPB and WFA, programming the export of lend-lease goods and controlling commercial exports, it was said.

Near Completion

Disclosure of Knollenberg's appointment was made along with the announcement by an FEA official that organization and staffing of FEA will be complete within 10 days. The long-awaited appointment of a personnel manager can be expected momentarily, the spokesman said.

One other top-bracket position, left vacant when Crowley announced the basic set-up of his organization October 26, now also has been filled.

L. M. Martin, formerly with the Lend-lease Administration—one of the three major Government agencies handling economic warfare before their mass marriage under the FEA—has been named director of the Transportation and Storage Branch, charged with rendering the necessary services relating to commodities.

In Same Bureau

Both Knollenberg's and Martin's branches are within the Bureau of Supplies, one of two main operating units of FEA, under the executive directorship of William H. Schubart, senior vice president of the Bank of Manhattan Co. of New York.

There will be a "substantial saving of personnel" when the coordination of the Federal agencies in FEA is completed, the spokesman said, with FEA "avoiding as much shock as possible" in the merger.

Nazis Subtly Threaten To Blast Half of World

London, Dec. 3 (INS).—"Das Reich," Nazi Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels' weekly magazine, emerged with a new but somewhat mystifying threat today. According to the German overseas agency the Nazi periodical boasted:

"The day is not far off when it will be possible to blow up half the globe."

Evanti Wins Home Praise At Recital

Commissioners of Eagle Harbor presents Lillian Evanti in a song recital on Friday night in Vermont Avenue Baptist Church. Accompanist: Ariuro Popolardo, Program of Songs by Handel, Donaudy, Peradisi, Thomas, Evanti, Fernandez, Hageman Puccini, Hickerson, Bostner and Verdi.

Very complimentary in size was the audience assembled last evening in Vermont Avenue Baptist Church to hear a song recital by Lillian Evanti, the Washingtonian soprano, who has become an international artist through her appearances in Europe and in Latin-American countries. It was pleasant to note such a cordial recognition at home of a singer who has taken pride in representing her native city abroad. Too often the artist shares the fate of the prophet in being not without honor save in the community of origin.

Since her last recital here Miss Evanti gained in the surety of her vocal line and in the control of tone coloring. This was immediately evident in her reading of Handel's "Care Selve" with which her program opened. The steadily sustained crescendo and diminuendo on held notes was firm on the breath, and the pianissimo prolongations were finely graduated. Her group in Italian containing also Stefano Donaudy's "Preduto ho lasperanza" and Pietro Paradisi's "Quel ruscelletto" served to disclose both the sweetness and the brilliance of her tone. The graces of her singing were kept in proper relief by the excellent accompaniments of Arturo Papalardo.

Her facility in fioriture was displayed in the aria, "Je suis Titania," wherein the staccati, roulades, trills and other embellishments were adroitly treated. Two of her own compositions, settings of "The Lord Is My Shepherd" and the late John Gillespie Magee's poem, "High Flight," showed imagination both in themes and harmonies. The setting of the psalm is particularly effective in combining a pastoral atmosphere with a mood of joyous confidence. Between these two songs she offered the first performance in this country of "Samaritana da Floresta" by the Brazilian composer, Oscar Lorenzo Fernandez, and two of Richard Hageman's lyrics: "At the Well" and "Do Not Go, My Love, Without Asking My Leave."

The Chinese slave girl Liu's aria from Puccini's "Turnadot," a number seldom heard in recital, was appropriately combined in a group with two Negro spirituals: "City Called Heaven" and "I Want Jesus to Walk With Me." As a final number Miss Evanti sang "Ah, fors' lui" from "La Traviata," in which she recently won distinction with the National Negro Opera Company at the Watergate and in Chicago.

Mrs. Roosevelt To Be Guest At USO Tea

Servicemen and women will have the opportunity to meet Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and several other leaders at entertainments here over this weekend.

The progress of the campaign to promote use of overseas V-mail will be described at an intermission by Miss Mabel R. Cook of the National USO and Maj. Arthur Grostepan, commanding officer of the Signal Photo-Mail Service at Fort Myer.

Other honor guests will include Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Kenneth C. Royall, Col. and Mrs. Sam Munsell, Col. and Mrs. Leo Crabbs, Col. and Mrs. Clifford Stein, Col. and Mrs. William Higgins, Capt. John H. Simpson, Lieut. Comdr. W. D. Thompson and Maj. and Mrs. William Bellamy.

Mrs. Roosevelt will be honor guest at a tea at 4 p. m. tomorrow at the Service Women's USO Club, 1911 H st. nw.

British Manpower Is Problem Now on Production Front

England's chief production problem is no longer inadequate shipping tonnage but a "practically dry" well of man and woman power, the Right Hon. Ben Smith, new British Minister Resident for Supply, yesterday told his first press conference in Washington since assuming the post.

His country has been able to man her armed forces so well only because manufactured munitions and other supplies sent by America have enabled her to release men who would otherwise be needed in production, he stated.

Minister Smith, who has just arrived here to succeed Col. John J. Llewellin, recently named Minister of Food in London, declared also that food has become the most important item of import from America to his country.

Citing individual Briton's rations of 26 cents worth of meat a week and one egg every three weeks in winter, Smith stated that despite the personal hardship rationing had imposed, it had resulted in no bitterness.

Wearing the tiepin given him when he attended the American Federation of Labor convention which elected William Green to replace Samuel Gompers, Smith, champion of labor for the past 40 years, urged that the cooperation between this country continue as a means of securing lasting peace. "It is practically a family relationship by now," he declared.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — I'll Be Down to Get You in a Taxi, Honey — By Milton Caniff

NOBODY BUT AN OLD CHINA HAND PILOT LIKE CAPTAIN MACK COULD HAVE FOUND AN OPEN SPOT FOR A BELLY LANDING IN THIS LOUSY TERRAIN...
HE USED TO FLY THIS ROUTE BEFORE THE JAPS MOVED IN
COL. CORKIN FIGURES THAT OUR PARATROOPS CAN GET THE SURVIVORS BACK THROUGH THE JUNGLE TO FRIENDLY TERRITORY—WITH SUPPLIES DROPPED BY PARACHUTE...
LOOK, CAPTAIN, THERE'S THE TRANSPORT!...IT'S ON A ROAD THROUGH A CLEARING—COULD WE JUMP, MOVE THE WRECK—AND YOU LAND THIS AIRPLANE TO PICK UP THE SURVIVORS?...
THIS BUGGY WASN'T DESIGNED TO TAKE OFF FROM JUNGLE ROADS...BUT NEITHER DO I LIKE TO THINK OF GRETT MURMUR HIKING BACK THROUGH THAT TANGLE!...WE'LL RISK IT!...
